

CRES CENT

Family Records

Family Records

OF

Paternal - Maternal

SIDES.

Seven Generations
Given.

Origin and history of the name of Brooks

American Publishers' Association

MARY STUART FOSTER FUND

NON - CIRCULATING

NON - CIRCULATING

This Volume is PRESENTED

TO

with Compliments
OF

DATE:

*But strew his ashes to the wind,
Whose sword or voice has served mankind,
And is he dead, whose glorious mind
Lifts him on high?
To live in hearts we leave behind,
Is not to die.*

PUBLISHERS' NOTE.

A NUMBER of letters and material have been received of a genealogical nature, with requests to incorporate the same into this work. It is to be regretted that this cannot be done, as the object of this work is simply to preserve and perpetuate the names and biographical history of the most notable members of this family name.

The preservation of such a record cannot fail to prove invaluable and a source of pride and interest not only to persons of the name but to the world in general; and this book may prove the foundation upon which a monumental work may be constructed.

ORIGIN AND HISTORY OF THE
NAME
OF BROOKS

WITH BIOGRAPHIES OF ALL THE MOST NOTED
PERSONS OF THAT NAME.

AND AN ACCOUNT OF THE ORIGIN OF SURNAMES AND FORENAMES

TOGETHER WITH OVER FIVE HUNDRED CHRISTIAN NAMES OF MEN AND WOMEN
AND THEIR SIGNIFICANCE

THE CRESCENT FAMILY RECORD

"To live in hearts we leave behind is not to die."

CHICAGO, ILL.
AMERICAN PUBLISHERS' ASSOCIATION

1905

CS
71
B87
1905

24 217

LANDING OF COLUMBUS

CONTENTS.

Frontispiece.	- - - - -	Vase of Flowers.
Introduction,	- - - - -
Illustration,	- - - - -	Coats-of-Arms.
Origin and History of the Family Name,	- -
The First of the Name in America,	- - -
Principal Branches of the Family,	- - - -
Historical and Biographical,	- - - -	23
Origin of the Surname,	- - - - -	49
Origin of the Forename,	- - - - -	81
Genealogy,	- - - - -	93
Heraldry,	- - - - -	94
Illustration of Camp-Fire Chats,	- - - -	98
Patriotic Societies of the United States,	- - -	99
Forenames of Men and Their Significance,	- -	103
Forenames of Women and Their Significance,	-	109
The Crescent Family Records,	- - - -	113

INTRODUCTION.

NOW that we all have surnames, we are apt to forget that it was not always so. We cannot easily realize the time when John, Thomas and Andrew, Mary and Abigail, were each satisfied with a single name, nor reflect that the use of two is not a refinement dating from an obscure and unknown antiquity, but quite within the reach of record and history.

Every name, no doubt, originally had a meaning, or was at first assumed or imposed from its real or supposed fitness, from some accidental circumstance, or from mere caprice. Each individual is distinguished from his fellows by his name. But for this system history and biography could scarcely exist.

Our proper name is our individuality; in our own thoughts and in the thoughts of those who know us, they cannot be separated. Our names are uttered, and at once, whether in connection with blame or praise, with threat or entreaty, with hatred or love, we ourselves are affected by the ideas and feelings expressed. A few trifling words, in no way meant to apply to the man they describe, suffice to awaken the recollection of that man, his physical peculiarities, his moral character, and the most remarkable acts and events of his life; a few syllables will cause the tear to start afresh from the mother's eye, after years of consolation and resignation to her loss; they will summon the tell-tale blush to the maiden's cheek, and she immediately thinks her secret is discovered; they will make a lover's heart beat more rapidly; rekindle the angry glance in an enemy's eye; and in a friend separated from his friend, will renew all his past regrets and his fondest hopes. None the less rapidly do our thoughts connect a name with the idea of the thing to which it belongs, be it land of birth, country, town, river, road, valley or hill. Dislike, desire, recollection of pain or pleasure, admiration, jealousy, kind feelings, national hatreds and love of country, one and all may be evoked by a single word, because the word represents to us the very object which has created those emotions within us. Every person, even the most inquisitive observer of words and things, must have remarked the great variety that exists in the names of families. He cannot fail to notice that such names are of widely different significations, many being identical with names of places, offices, professions, trades, qualities, familiar natural objects and other things. There is probably no person capable of the least degree of reflection who has not often, in idle moments, amused himself with some little speculation on the probable origin of his own name. It is not sufficient for a person of inquisitive mind that he bears such and such a surname because his father and his grandfather bore it; he will naturally feel desirous of knowing why and when their ancestors acquired it.

What would the annals of mankind and the records of biography be if people had never borne any proper names? It would be a mere chaos of undefined incidents and an unintelligible mass of facts, without symmetry or beauty, and without any interest at all for after ages. Indeed, without names, mankind would have wanted what is perhaps the greatest stimulus of which the mind is susceptible — the love of fame; and consequently, many of the mightiest achievements in every department of human endeavor would have been lost to the world.

Many of our ancient and modern institutions are intimately connected with the meaning and continued existence of proper names. It has been well said that hereditary names perpetuate the memory of ancestors better than any other monument, an affectionate remembrance this, surely, and one which fosters the cause of morality; they teach, or at any rate remind sons of their duty to be worthy of their ancestors.

Though its importance be felt in all phases of our social life, the origin of proper names does not essentially belong to a civilized condition. Undoubtedly it is intimately connected with the gift of speech. A man must call his children by a distinctive appellation, either when he speaks to them or when he speaks of them in their absence, and when a gesture and an inflection of the voice are not sufficient to indicate his meaning. The distinctive title which he uses can only be a name exclusively applicable to the individual meant; on the other hand, the father will recognize the name given to him by his children. Again, the domestic animal, man's intelligent companion in his field sports, and the watchful guardian of his dwelling; the brook that runs beneath his home; the tree that shelters or the forest that conceals it; the hill or the vale near which it lies, will soon be named by those who wish to distinguish them from similar objects around. If other men come to live near the first family, they will receive a name and give one in return.

However simple these names be at first, so simple that they express nothing beyond the degree of relationship between father and mother and children, and the order of their birth in the case of the last; be they mere substantives used to point out more specially the dwelling and all that surrounds it; as the hut, the tree, or the brook—or even supposing that in the common intercourse which may exist between one family and its neighbor the only distinctive terms employed are we and they, and further, that sun, fire, destruction, or thunder, designate the beneficent or angry deity—still the system of proper names already exists in embryo, and is ready to be further developed, even to the highest degree of importance and intricacy, in proportion as the social principle itself becomes more extended and more complicated in its constitution.

Add new members to the family; collect several families together and form them into one tribe; place a number of tribes holding friendly relations with one another in a less limited tract of land; then will the spot occupied by each tribe, every village or cluster of inhabitants belonging to the same tribe, every hill and thicket and brook—in a word, the land and the gathering of men upon it assume proper names, just as the tribes had already done before, and the families and the individuals that constituted them.

From this outline of the first elements of social life, let us remove, in thought, for a moment, and place ourselves in the heart of civilized existence. The names of lands and dwellings have changed into the designations of powerful states and magnificent cities; names which will be familiar for centuries after the grass has grown over and hidden even the ruins of their palaces and their fortresses and obliterated the very traces of their existence, and after political or naturally induced revolutions have depopulated, divided and totally dismembered the provinces of mighty empires. Here the names of men distinguish the individual members of a great social body, magistrates, princes, chiefs of the great civil and political whole; and among these names, all of them less or more important at present, there are some which hereafter shall be handed down to history as a rich inheritance, an object of envy to the ambitious, and a pattern of conduct to the wise.

THE ORIGIN AND HISTORY
OF THE NAME OF BROOKS.

HISTORICAL AND BIOGRAPHICAL.

THE ORIGIN OF THE NAME OF BROOKS.

The name of Brooks is said to have been derived from residence near a stream. Its medieval forms are Ate-Broe, Atte-Broe, Attenbroke, etc., which was afterwards softened to A-Broke, and pluralised to Brooks.

The Brookes of County Suffolk, England, were descended from William de la Brooke, owner of the Manor of Brooke, in Somerset County; and who died in 1231. In the Hundred Rolls the word Broke, which means Brook, is quite extensively used in the description of names; as Henry le Brok; Laurence del Brok, etc.

COATS-OF-ARMS.

ENGLAND.

CREST: (1) On a mural coronet, an otter, ppr. (2) A badger, ppr.

MOTTO: Ut amnis vita labitur, which means, Life glides away like a river.

SCOTLAND.

CREST: A beaver, passant.

MOTTO: Perseverando, which means By persevering.

EARLY SETTLEMENT OF THE BROOKS IN AMERICA.

Richard Brooks, at the age of fourteen, came over in the Blessing in July, 1635. He resided in Marshfield in 1645. He removed to Scituate, then to Rehoboth. He gave the power of attorney to his son-in-law, Robert Crossman, of Taunton, in 1669, who sold his land in Scituate in 1699. He died in June, 1695.

Robert Brooks, an inhabitant of Maidstone, England, in March, 1634; and came over with his wife in the Hercules,

He resided at Marblehead, and had a grant of land between his old house and new in 1657.

William Brooks, at the age of twenty years, came on the Blessing in July, 1635, when he settled at Salem, Mass., where he became a proprietor in 1639.

THE BROOKS IN AMERICA.

A thorough perusal of the following life sketches of noted Brooks, eminent in all walks of life, will reveal the fact that the Brooks have been actively and intimately associated with the ecclesiastical, civil, industrial and commercial affairs of America; and to become conversant with their history will naturally create in our children a source of pride in the name of Brooks heretofore unappreciated.

As builders and merchants they have built cities and illumined the marts of trade; in the field of science and medicine they have obtained great prominence; in the arena of statesmanship they have produced men of thought and men of action; while at the bar and in the administration of justice they have shown erudition and wisdom. As clergymen, educators and lecturers they have occupied high places; as musicians, composers and artists they have contributed profusely to social life; and as authors and poets they are worthy to be crowned with a laurel wreath of fame. Also as heroes of colonial, Revolutionary and later wars they have rendered patriotic service, each one of whom has added luster to the name of Brooks.

BROOKS, AARON BENAJA, lawyer, public official, was born Feb. 9, 1855, near Seale, Russell County, Ala. He was educated in the public schools of his native state; and graduated from the High School of Greenville, Ala. For two terms he was Mayor of Rutledge, Ala.; has been justice of the peace; and for several years tax collector of Crenshaw County, Ala. He has attained success in the profession of law in his native state; has a large practice in Laverne; for the past seven years has been Clerk and Treasurer of his city; and in 1904 was appointed Registrar in Chancery. He has always been prominently identified with the business and public affairs of his state; and has filled various other positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, ABILAH EDDY, business man, merchant, manufacturer, was born Aug. 16, 1842, in Wendell, Mass. He was educated in the public schools of New England. For many years he was connected with the business and public affairs of Orange, Mass.; and was a member of the school committee of that city. In 1873 he removed west; is now senior member of the firm of A. E. Brooks and Company, well-known manufacturing confectioners and jobbers, of Grand Rapids, Mich. He is prominently identified with the business and public affairs of his city; has always been active in the advancement of its welfare; and has filled several positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, ALBERT A., merchant, manufacturer, banker, public official, was born Oct. 18, 1824, in Bethel, Vt. He was educated in the public schools of New England; in 1856 engaged in business at Stockbridge, Vt.; and in 1861-73 was postmaster of that city. Since 1875 he has been a successful merchant of Bethel, Vt.; and has been prominently identified with various manufacturing and business enterprises. In 1877-88 he was engaged with the Gayseville Manufacturing Company in the manufacturing of underwear and was president of that company. He is president of the Bethel Shoe Company; and a director and vice-president of the National White River Bank of Bethel. He has been a republican since the organization of that party; has served as a Justice of the Peace in Stockbridge and Bethel for nearly half a century; and has always been prominently identified with the business public affairs of his city, county and state.

BROOKS, ALBERT WADSWORTH, merchant, public official, was born July 28, 1863, in Augusta, Maine. He received the rudiments of his education in the public schools of New England; and graduated from Amherst College. He is a successful merchant of Augusta, Maine; and treasurer of The B. F. Parrott Company of that city. He has been councilman and alderman of his city; a director of the Board of Trade; a director of the Williams School District; a member of the Board of Registration; has been overseer of the poor; and filled various other positions of trust and honor in the gift of his city, county and state.

BROOKS, ALFRED HULSE, geologist, was born July 18, 1871, in Ann Arbor, Mich. He has been connected with the United States Survey since 1894; and is now engaged in explorations in Alaska.

BROOKS, ALFRED LEROY, physician, surgeon, legislator, was born June 6, 1858, in Vinton, Iowa. He received the rudiments of his education in the public schools of his native state; graduated from Blairstown Academy; and received his degree of M. D. from the Rush Medical College of Chicago, Ill. He has been surgeon to the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad Company; and now has a large practice in Audubon, Iowa. He served with distinction as a member of the Twenty-fourth General Assembly of Iowa; is a member of the leading medical associations; and has filled numerous positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, ARTHUR, clergyman, author, was born in 1845 in Massachusetts. He was an Episcopal clergyman of New York City; and the author of Christ for To-Day. A volume of his sermons was reprinted in London. He died in 1895.

BROOKS, ARTHUR HUBERT, clergyman, was born March 18, 1869, in London, England. He received a thorough education in London; attended St. Augustine's; and graduated from Kenyon College of Gambier, Ohio. He has attained eminence as a clergyman of the Episcopal Church; and now fills a pastorate in La Grange, Ga.

BROOKS, AUBREY LEE, lawyer, public official, was born May 21, 1871, in Bethel Hill, Person County, N. C. He was educated in the public schools of his native state; and graduated from the University of North Carolina. He has attained success as a noted lawyer of North Carolina at Greensboro; and is now Solicitor for the Ninth Judicial District of North Carolina. In 1890 he was presidential elector on the Democratic ticket and has filled various other positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, BENJAMIN FORRESTER, soldier, business man, public official, was born April 4, 1844, in Petersham, Mass. He was educated in the public schools of his native city; and graduated from the High School of Templeton, Mass. During the Civil war he served for three years as a high private in Company D, Thirty-sixth Regiment Massachusetts Volunteers; and participated in numerous battles and skirmishes. He is in partnership with his father as proprietor of Massacott House of Barre, Mass.; has been postmaster of his city for the past ten years; and has filled numerous other positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, BYRON ALDEN, inventor, author, was born Dec. 12, 1845, in Theresa, N. Y. He received a thorough education and graduated from the Wesleyan University. He has invented four different kinds of typewriters, notably the Remington. He has made many important inventions in printing mechanics such as the Linotype and typesetting machines. He resides in New York City. He is the author of King Saul, Those Children and Their Teachers, Phil Vernon and His Schoolmaster; Earth Revisited; and other works.

BROOKS, CASSIUS WALKER, physician, surgeon, public official, was born June 30, 1849, in East Randolph, Vt. He received the rudiments of his education in the public schools of East Randolph, Vt.; and graduated from the High School of Montpelier, Vt. He received his degree of M. D. from the medical department of the University of Vermont and Harvard University. He has attained success in the practice of his profession; has been Mayor of the City of Enterprise, Kansas; vice-president and treasurer of the Golden Belt Medical Society of Kansas; and United States examining surgeon for the pension department at Abilene, Kansas. He now practices his profession in Guthrie, Oklahoma.

BROOKS, CHARLES, educator, author, was born Oct. 30, 1795, in Medford, Mass. He was a prominent Massachusetts educator; and the author of History of Medford; The Christian in His Closet; Daily Monitor; Family Prayer-Book; Elements of Ornithology; Introduction to Ornithology; and ten volumes of biography. He died July 7, 1872.

BROOKS, CHARLES, clergyman, was born Feb. 8, 1830, in Holden, Mass. He was educated at the Academy of Worcester, Mass.; graduated from the Brown University of Providence, R. I.; and from the Theological Institute of Newton, Mass. He is an eminent minister of the Baptist Church; and has filled pastorates in Vermont, Massachusetts and Iowa. He now fills a pastorate in Livermore, Iowa. He is prominent in all affairs pertaining to his denomination; and for nearly half a century has been a contributor to religious literature. His father, Samuel Brooks, was born in 1790 in Princeton, Mass.

BROOKS, CHARLES ALVIN, clergyman, was born Jan. 7, , in Watkins, N. Y. He was educated at Vernon Academy, Mount Hermon Academy, Newton Theological Seminary, and Rochester University. He has filled pastorates in Baptist Churches at Waterloo, Knowlesville and Pittsford, N. Y.; and is now pastor of the Third Street Church of Dayton, Ohio.

BROOKS, CHARLES GREENWOOD, business man, manufacturer, was born Dec. 23, 1819, in Rutland, Worcester County, Mass. He was educated at New Berlin Academy and at Norwich Academy, N. Y. For many years he has been a successful manufacturer and dealer in lumber and railroad ties and timber at Mt. Upton, Chenango County, N. Y. In 1902-03 he was supervisor of the town of Guilford, Chenango County, N. Y.; and has filled various other positions of trust and honor. He is a brother of Jonas Hapgood Brooks; and a descendant of Captain Thomas Brooke of Watertown and Concord, Mass.

BROOKS, CHARLES TIMOTHY, clergyman, author, was born June 20, 1813, in Salem, Mass. He was a Unitarian clergyman of Newport, R. I., in 1837-73. His other work includes Songs of Field and Flood; The Simplicity of Christ; William Ellery Channing; a Centennial Memory; and Poems Original and Transplanted. He died June 14, 1883, in Newport, R. I.

BROOKS, CHARLES VANCE, educator, clergyman, was born April 10, 1869, in Jonesboro, N. C. He was educated in the public schools of his native state; and graduated from Wake Forest College. For a number of years he was engaged in educational work, and was principal of schools. He is now an eminent minister of the Gospel; and fills a pastorate in Apex, N. C.

BROOKS, CHARLES WESLEY, clergyman, missionary, was born Aug. 25, 1836, in Solon, Cortland County, N. Y. He was educated at Norwich Academy; and was ordained a minister of the Baptist Church. He has filled pastorates in various churches in the state of New York; and in 1869-73 and since 1875 has been a district missionary of the Baptist Missionary Convention of the State of New York.

BROOKS, CHAUNCEY, merchant, was born Jan. 12, 1794, in Burlington, Conn. In 1856 he was made president of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. The Salt Works in the Kanawha region and other forms of enterprise were promoted by him. He died May 18, 1880.

BROOKS, CHAUNCEY, carpenter, builder, public official, was born June 26, 1842, in Eagle Valley, Orange County, N. Y. He was educated in the district schools of his native state. For many years he has been a successful carpenter and builder of Montgomery, N. Y.; and has been prominently identified with the business and public affairs of that city. He has been president of the Board of Village Trustees for a number of years; has been president of the Board of Water Commissioners; and has filled various other positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, CHRISTOPHER PARKINSON, lecturer, scientist, author, was born April 17, 1866, in England. In 1898 he organized and is managing director of New Bedford Textile School. He lectured in course of municipal lecturers, city of Boston in 1899. He is the author of Cotton Manufacturing; Weaving Calculations; and Cotton. Its Uses, Varieties, Fibre Structure and Cultivation.

BROOKS, DAVID, soldier, jurist, congressman, was born in 1756. He entered the army in 1776 as a Lieutenant in the Pennsylvania line; was captured at Fort Mifflin, and remained a prisoner for two years. He was a Representative in Congress from New York in 1797. He was subsequently first judge of Dutchess county for sixteen years. He died Aug. 30, 1838, in Dutchess county, N. Y.

BROOKS, E. W., business man, lumber dealer, was born July 9, 1846, in Stafford, Conn. He was educated in the public schools of New England; and graduated from Wilbraham Academy. He is a successful business man of Stafford Springs, Conn.; a well-known dealer in lumber; and prominently identified with the business and public affairs of his community.

BROOKS, EDGAR C., was born March 3, 1870, in Summerfield, Ohio. He was educated in the public schools; and then engaged in mercantile pursuits. He is now in the dry goods business at Pickens, W. Va.

BROOKS, EDMUND DEWITT, business man, bookseller, was born in 1866 in Red Wing, Minn. He received the rudiments of his education in the public schools of his native state; and graduated from Tabor College. He has filled various positions of trust and honor; and is now a successful business man and bookseller of Minneapolis, Minn.

BROOKS, EDWARD, educator, author, was born Jan. 16, 1831, in Stony Point, N. Y. He was the principal of the Millersville Normal School in Pennsylvania from 1866 to 1886, and since 1891 has been superintendent of the Philadelphia public schools. His writings are mainly, though not entirely, mathematical, and among them are The Normal Written Arithmetic; Philosophy of Arithmetic; Mental Science and Methods of Culture; The Story of the Iliad; The Story of the Odyssey; and The Story of the Aeneid.

BROOKS, EDWARD LUTHER, clergyman, was born July 7, 1869, in Wright, Hillsdale County, Mich. He was educated in the public schools of his native state; and at Hudson, Mich. He has attained eminence as a successful clergyman of the Congregational Church; and has been pastor of the Pisgah Congregational Church of Fort Recovery, Ohio; and the First Congregational Church of Detroit, Minn. He is now pastor of the First Congregational Church of Hutchinson, Minn.

BROOKS, ELBRIDGE GERRY, clergyman, author, was born in 1816 in New Hampshire. He was a Universalist clergyman of Philadelphia; and the author of Universalism a Practical Power; Our New Departure; and Universalism in Life and Doctrine. He died in 1878.

BROOKS, ELBRIDGE STREETER, author, was born April 14, 1846; in Lowell, Mass. He has been editor of the Brooklyn Daily Times, St. Nicholas Magazine, and Wide Awake. He is the author of Life Work of Elbridge Gerry Brooks; In No Man's Land; Historic Boys; In Leisler's Times; Chivalric Days; Storyed Holidays; Historic Girls; Story of the American Indian; The Story of New York; Story of the American Sailor; Story of the United States; The True Story of Columbus; Heroic Happenings; A Son of Issachar; The True Story of George Washington; The Century Book for Young Americans; A Boy of the First Empire; Graet Men's Sons; The story of Miriam of Magdala; The True Story of Abraham Lincoln; The Story of the American Soldier; The Century Book of Famous Americans; Under the Tamaracks; and The Long Walls. He died Jan. 7, 1902, in Somerville, Mass.

BROOKS, ERVIN DAVIS, physician, surgeon, oculist, aurist, was born Sept. 6, 1854, in Dundee, Mich. In 1872-76 he attended the Michigan Agricultural College; in 1882-85 attended the University of Michigan; and graduated from the Chicago Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat College and from the New York Ophthalmic College. In 1885 he was house surgeon at the University of Michigan; and in 1895 was assistant to the chair of Ophthalmology and Otology in that institution. For several years he was a member of the staff of the New York Ophthalmic College; and now practices his profession in Ann Arbor, Mich. In 1902-03 he was president of the Detroit District Anti-Saloon League and since 1902 has been president of the Ann Arbor Anti-Saloon League.

BROOKS, EZRA ROCKWELL, physician, surgeon, was born June 12, 1861, in Seymour, Iowa. He received the rudiments of his education in the public schools of his native state; graduated from the High School of Seymour, Iowa; and in 1886 received the degree of M. D. from the College of Medicine of the University of Iowa. He is a successful physician and surgeon of Bodie, Cal.; and prominently identified with the business and public affairs of that city. He is a member of several medical societies. His father was John Henry Brooks, born in 1818, and died in 1901 in Seymour, Iowa; and was a prominent educator. Dr. Ezra R. Brooks has two brothers—Samuel L. Brooks and John L. Brooks.

BROOKS, FRANK, physician, surgeon, was born in 1850, in Groton, Mass. He was educated in the public schools; and graduated in medicine from the Bennett College of Eclectic Medicine and Surgery of Chicago, Ill. He is a successful physician and surgeon of Seattle, Wash.; and surgeon to several large corporations. For two terms he served with distinction as president of the Eclectic State Medical Association of the State of Washington; and has filled numerous other positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, FRANK LESTER, educator, clergyman, was born June 16, 1860, in Charleston, Maine. He received a thorough education in the public schools and academies of New England; and subsequently graduated from the Boston University School of Theology. For a number of years he was engaged in educational work as a teacher in the public schools of Maine. He is now an eminent minister of the Gospel in the Methodist Episcopal Church; and has filled pastorates in Maine, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut. He now fills a pastorate in Bourne, Mass.; and is prominently identified with the religious affairs of his denomination.

BROOKS, FRANK M., lawyer, legislator, was born Dec. 31, 1864, in Bowie County, Texas. He received a thorough public school and academic education. He is a successful lawyer of New Boston, Texas; and prominently identified with its business and public affairs. He has been county attorney; served with distinction as a member of the Texas State Legislature; and has filled numerous other positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, FRANK PETER POMPEY, farmer, educator, clergyman, legislator, was born Sept. 22, 1850, in Madison County, Miss. He is a successful farmer and teacher and noted preacher of Cary, Miss. He has been supervisor, postmaster, justice of the peace, and a member of the Mississippi State Legislature. He has always been actively identified with the business and public affairs of his community; and has filled various other positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, FRANKLIN E., educator, lawyer, congressman, was born in 1860 in Sturbridge, Mass. In 1883 he graduated from the Brown University; and has received the degrees of A. B. and A. M. from that institution. For several years he taught school; and was instructor in the Boston Latin School. In 1888 he graduated from the law school of the Boston University; and practiced law in Boston until 1891. Since 1892 he has practiced law in Colorado Springs, Colo.; and in 1903-05 was a Representative from Colorado to the Fifty-eighth Congress as a republican.

BROOKS, GEORGE BYRON, lawyer, jurist, was born July 16, 1834, in Acworth, N. H. He was educated at Kimball Union Academy; and in 1860 graduated from Dartmouth College. He is one of the foremost lawyers of Michigan; and has a large practice in Saginaw. For six years he was Judge of the Recorder's Court; for thirty years was United States C. Court Commissioner; and is now United States Commissioner. He has always been prominently identified with the business and public affairs of his state; and has filled various other positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, GEORGE FRANCIS, business man, treasurer, manufacturer, was born Aug. 23, 1856, in Rindge, N. H. He received his education in the public schools of New England; and attended Howe's Business College of Worcester, Mass. He is prominently identified with the business and public affairs of Worcester, Mass.; and is secretary and treasurer of the Harrington and Richardson Arms Company of that city. For thirteen years he has been a member of the school committee of Worcester, Mass.; and has filled various other positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, GEORGE H., lawyer, public official, was born July 17, 1874, in Washington, D. C. He was educated in Garden City, Long Island, N. Y.; and has attained success in the practice of law in New York City. He has been assistant district attorney of Kings County, N. Y.; and has filled several other positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, GEORGE M., lawyer, state senator, congressman, was born July 26, 1824, in Concord, Mass. He was a member of the Massachusetts Legislature in 1858; of the State Senate in 1859; of the committee chosen in 1859 to revise the statutes of Massachusetts; and was elected to the Forty-first and Forty-second Congresses.

BROOKS, GEORGE M. D., soldier, farmer, public official, was born Jan. 19, 1845, in Hardin County, Tenn. He was educated in the public schools of his native state. In 1863-65 he served as a soldier in the Federal army. He is a successful farmer of Burkley, Ky.; and now fills the office of postmaster for that city. For seven years he served as a justice of the peace; and has filled various other positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, GEORGE W., lawyer, jurist, was born in North Carolina. He resided at Elizabeth City whence he was, in 1866, appointed United States Judge for the Eastern District of North Carolina.

BROOKS, GEORGE WILSON, business man, public official, was born Sept. 11, 1850, in Cumberland County, N. J. He was educated in the public school, and attended a private academy in New Jersey. He is a successful business man and manufacturer of butter of Muncie, Ind. He was councilman one term in the city of Muncie; and has filled several other positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, HARRY AUGUSTUS, business man, druggist, was born March 6, 1879, in Carroll, Iowa. He was educated in the public schools of his native state; and graduated from the High School of Carroll, Iowa. For the past fifteen years he has been engaged in the drug business at Oto, Iowa; and is prominently identified with the business and public affairs of that city.

BROOKS, HARRY SAYER, journalist, was born Aug. 2, 1852, in Waverly, N. Y. He was one of the three young men to found the Elmira Telegram. From the inception of the paper Mr. Brooks was its business and editorial manager, soon becoming the sole owner.

BROOKS, HENRY H., lawyer. He is a prominent attorney of Kansas City, Mo.; and identified with the business and public affairs of that city. He has filled several positions of trust; and occasionally contributes to current publications.

BROOKS, HENRY HARLOW, physician, surgeon, was born March 31, 1871, in Minnesota. He was educated at the University of Oregon; and in 1895 received his degree of M. D. from the department of medicine and surgery of the University of Michigan. He has been assistant professor of the New York University, Bellevue Hospital Medical College; and is now a successful physician and surgeon of New York City. He has been assistant surgeon to the Seventh Regiment National Guard of New York; Pathologist to the New York Zoological Society; is a member of various medical and scientific societies; and has filled numerous positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, HENRY L., educator, business man, was born Nov. 1, 1853, in Worcester, Mass. He received his education in the public schools; and graduated from Winona Normal School. In 1879-82 he was principal of Norwalk Graded Schools. He is now a successful business man of Chippewa Falls, Wis.; and prominently identified with the business and public affairs of that city.

BROOKS, HENRY R., business president, was born Aug. 27, 1853, in East Glastonbury, Conn. He was educated in the public schools of New England; and at Glastonbury Academy. He has been president of the trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church; a class leader and Sunday School Superintendent; and prominent in the public, business and religious affairs of his community. He is president of a Granite Quarry; and resides in Glastonbury, Conn.

BROOKS, HENRY S., journalist, author, was born in London, England. In 1850 he was a California pioneer; editor of California Mountaineer in 1861; associate editor of The Pacific in 1862-65. He is the author of Dona Paula's Treasure; and A Catastrophe in Boemia.

BROOKS, HIRAM G., physician, surgeon, was born July 27, 1858, in Benton County, Tenn. He was educated in the public schools of his native state; and graduated from the medical department of the University of Tennessee. He is a successful physician of Paris, Tenn.; and prominently identified with the business and public affairs of his city. He is a member of the Henry County Medical Society; a member of the State Medical Society; a member of the American Medical Association; and has filled various positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, HORACE, soldier, was born Aug. 14, 1814, in Boston, Mass. He served in the Seminole war of 1835-36, receiving the brevet of First Lieutenant for gallantry and good conduct. For his services during the war he received two brevets—that of Major and that of Lieutenant-Colonel. He was brevetted Brigadier-General at the close of the war. From 1872 till 1877 he commanded the presidio at San Francisco, and on the latter date was retired from active service, being over sixty-two years of age. He died March 26, 1890, in Detroit, Mich.

BROOKS, HORATIO G., locomotive builder, was born Oct. 30, 1828, in Portsmouth, N. H. He began business in Dunkirk, N. Y., in 1869, under the name of The Brooks Locomotive Works. From one locomotive a month, under the impulse of his strong mind and unceasing activity, the works grew until they were producing about two hundred locomotives a year. In 1883 the company bought the works back again at a fair price. Mr. Brooks was three times Mayor of Dunkirk and a highly respected man. The works are yet in operation, employing 1,200 men in busy times. He died April 20, 1887, in Dunkirk, N. Y.

BROOKS, JABEZ, educator, college president, author, was born Sept. 18, 1823, in England. Since 1869 he has been Professor of Greek at University of Minneapolis; president Minneapolis Educational Association, 1868; Methodist. He is the author of Attic Greek; a book for beginners.

BROOKS, JAMES, journalist, congressman, was born Nov. 10, 1810, in Portland, Maine. In 1835 he was elected to the Legislature of Maine; and in 1836 established the New York Daily Express, of which he was the chief editor and proprietor. In 1847 he was elected a member of the New York Legislature; from 1849 to 1853 was a Representative in Congress from the City of New York; and re-elected to the Thirty-eighth, Thirty-ninth, Fortieth, Forty-first, Forty-second and Forty-third Congresses. He died April 30, 1873, in Washington, D. C.

BROOKS, JAMES C., soldier, mechanical engineer, president, was born March 26, 1843, in New Albany, Ind. He was educated in the public and private schools of New Albany, Ind.; and graduated from the Portsmouth Academy of Portsmouth, N. H. During the Civil war he attained the rank of Major in the United States Volunteers. For many years he has been prominently identified with the business and public affairs of Pennsylvania and has been trustee of Drexel Institute of Williamson School of Philadelphia, and manager of the Epileptic Hospital of that city. He has been closely identified with many leading business and financial corporations of Philadelphia, Pa.; is president of the Southwark Foundry, vice-president of the Standard Ice Company; and a director in the Franklin Bank, the Northern Liberties Bank, the Western Saving Fund Society and various other institutions. He is a member of various clubs and societies; and has filled numerous positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, JAMES F., lawyer, jurist, was born March 2, 1868, in Philadelphia, Pa. He received the rudiments of his education in the public schools of his native state; and graduated from the University of Pennsylvania and from the University of Michigan. He has attained success as one of the foremost lawyers of the west; and has a large practice at Brookings, S. Dak. He has been city attorney and municipal judge of Brookings at various times; and has filled other positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, JAMES MARION, lawyer, legislator, state senator, was born Sept. 23, 1849, in Crab Orchard, Ky. He was educated at the University of Kentucky. In 1873 he was elected district attorney of Ventura County, Cal.; and in 1879 was again elected to that office. In 1882 he was elected a member of the California State Senate; and in 1886 was elected to the California Assembly. In 1887 he became United States District Attorney of California; and has filled numerous other positions of trust and honor. In 1896 he was appointed trustee of the State Normal School at Los Angeles; and is now prominently identified with the business and public affairs of that city. His father, Thomas Tillman Brooks, lived in Virginia.

BROOKS, JAMES T., merchant, banker, was born Aug. 10, 1856, in Brooksville, Ala. He was educated in the public schools; and graduated from Homer College of Homer, La. He is a successful merchant of Prescott, Ark.; and prominently identified with the business and public affairs of that city. He has been president of several business enterprises; president of the Citizen's Bank; and prominently identified with various business and public enterprises.

BROOKS, JESSE N., electrician, was born Feb. 1, 1844, in Guinnett County, Ga. He was educated in the public schools of his native state. He is a successful electrician of Atlanta, Ga.; and has filled several positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, JESSE W., soldier, business man, capitalist, jurist, was born Sept. 30, 1831, in Woodsdale, Person County, N. C. He received a thorough education in the public and private schools of his native state; and graduated from Woodsdale Academy of Person County, N. C. In 1861-65 he served during the war as an Adjutant in the Confederate army; and was in numerous battles and skirmishes. For nearly half a century he has been identified with the public, business and financial affairs of North Carolina; for many years was a well-known magistrate of Dunham; and has filled numerous positions of trust and honor. He is now retired from active business and resides in Dunham, N. C.

BROOKS, JOE A., business man, manager, was born Dec. 26, 1830, in Spring Hill, Maury County, Tenn. He was educated in the public schools of his native state; and has had a varied and extensive business career. He has been engaged as business manager of several enterprises; and is now in the undertaking business at Tipton, Tenn. He has always been prominently identified with the business and public welfare of his community; and has filled several positions of trust and honor in various capacities.

BROOKS, JOHN D., lawyer, jurist, was born July 17, 1863, in Wayne County, Iowa. He was educated in the public schools of his native state; studied law, and was admitted to the bar. He is now a successful lawyer and abstractor of Alton, Mo.; has been assistant prosecuting attorney; served as Mayor of Alton; and for several years was Judge of the Probate Court of Oregon County, Mo. He has always been prominently identified with the business and public affairs of his community, and has filled various other positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, JOHN DAILEY, soldier, business man, real estate dealer, was born April 6, 1877, in New York City. He was educated in the public schools of his native city; and graduated from the Hempstead Institute of Long Island. He is now a successful real estate dealer of New York City. He has been a member of Troop CC, New York National Guard; and has filled several positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, JOHN GAUNT, physician, surgeon, public official, was born Oct. 5, 1840, in Montgomery County, Ky. He was educated principally in Eureka, Ill.; and graduated in medicine from the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia, Pa. In 1872-73 he was traveling physician for the Government of Hawaii under King Kamehameha. He has been councilman of the city of Paducah, Ky.; and a member of the Board of Education of that city. He has also been city physician of Paducah, Ky.; has been president of the Kentucky State Medical Society; and filled numerous other positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, JOHN M., soldier, educator, was born in 1820. He designed the ram Merrimac and thus revolutionized marine warfare; is still living at Lexington, Va. He is Professor Emeritus of Physics at the Virginia Military Institute.

BROOKS, JOHN MEDFORD, physician, surgeon, was born June 29, 1869, in Donnellson, Ill. In 1895 he graduated from the medical department of Washington University of St. Louis, Mo. He is a successful physician and surgeon of Golden City, Mo.; and prominently identified with the business and public affairs of that city. He is a member of the leading medical societies; and has filled several positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, JOHN TINLEY, lawyer, banker, state senator, was born Oct. 17, 1850, in Keokuk County, Iowa. He received the rudiments of his education in the public schools of his native state; and graduated from the Iowa Wesleyan University of Mount Pleasant. He is a successful lawyer of Hedrick, Iowa; vice-president of the First National Bank of that city; and prominently identified with the business and public affairs of his city, county and state. He has been Mayor of his city for eleven terms; is now an honored member of the Iowa State Senate; and has filled numerous other positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, JOHN WATSON, lawyer, was born Sept. 9, 1870, near Asheville, N. C. He was educated in the public schools of his native state; and graduated from the law department of the University of North Carolina. Since 1893 he has practiced law in Walla Walla, Wash.; and is identified with the business and public affairs of that city.

BROOKS, JONAS HAPGOOD, banker, was born Jan. 5, 1848, in Rutland, Worcester County, Mass. He was educated at the Oxford Academy and at the Norwich Academy, N. Y. In 1869-73 he was teller at the First National Bank of New Berlin, N. Y.; in 1873-81 filled the same position at the National Exchange Bank of Albany, N. Y.; and in 1881-89 was cashier of that institution. In 1889-98 he was cashier of the Albany City National Bank of Albany, N. Y. He is a member of Society Founders and Patriots of America; is a thirty-second degree Mason; and has held various offices of trust and honor. He is a descendant of Capt. Thomas Brooke, of Watertown in 1630 and Concord in 1635.

BROOKS, JOSEPH, clergyman, state senator, governor, was born Nov. 1, 1821, in Butler County, Ohio. When the Civil war began, he became chaplain of the First Missouri Artillery. He afterwards aided in raising the Eleventh and Thirty-third Missouri Regiments, and was transferred to the latter as chaplain. He removed to Little Rock in the autumn of 1868, and was elected State Senator in 1870. In 1872 he became Governor. He was appointed postmaster at Little Rock in March, 1875, and held the office till his death. He died April 30, 1877, in Little Rock, Ark.

BROOKS, JOSEPH SCOTT, lawyer, public official, was born Aug. 13, 1856, in Paris, Ky. He was educated at the Kentucky University, and at the Washington and Lee University. He has attained success at the bar; and practices his profession in Kansas City, Mo. He has been assistant prosecuting attorney of Jackson County, Mo., with headquarters in Kansas City; and has filled several other positions of trust and honor. His father, Samuel Brooks, was born in 1800 in Kentucky; and his grandfather, Abijah Brooks, was born in 1772 in Boston, Mass.

BROOKS, JOSEPH WILKES, telegrapher, electrician, was born Feb. 11, 1855, in Wheelock, Robertson County, Texas. He received his education in the public schools of his native state. For many years he has been identified with railroad work; and has been manager and chief operator of telegraph companies; and is now an electrician and telegrapher of El Paso, Texas. He has always been interested in the business and public affairs of his community; and has filled several positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, KENDALL, educator, clergyman, was born Sept. 3, 1821, in Roxbury, Mass. In 1841 he graduated from the Brown University, and in 1845 from the Newton Theological Institution. During 1845-52 he was pastor of the Baptist church at Eastport, Maine; and for ten years was pastor in Fitchburg, Mass. In 1852-55 he was Professor of Mathematics in the Colby University; president of the Kalamazoo College during 1868-67; and since 1888 has been Professor of Mathematics in the Alma College, Michigan. For three years he was editor of the National Baptist of Philadelphia. He died in 1898 in Michigan.

BROOKS LEE A., farmer, miner, public official, was born Oct. 15, 1864, in Caseyville, Ky. For many years he was engaged in farming and coal mining; and is now in the employ of the United States postoffice as mail carrier at Murphysboro, Ill.

BROOKS, LEWIS, manufacturer, merchant, philanthropist, was born in 1793, in New Milford, Conn. He was a manufacturer of woolen cloth, and later in the mercantile business. In 1837 he retired, and devoted his time chiefly to investing his money and looking after his real estate. He made various charitable bequests, among which was $10,000 to the Rochester City Hospital; a like sum to St. Mary's Hospital; and $5,000 each to the Industrial School and the Female Charitable Society. He also bequeathed $120,000 to the University of Virginia, $31,000 alone being expended on the work of collecting a cabinet. He died Aug. 9, 1877, in Rochester, N. Y.

BROOKS, LOUIS C., electrical engineer, expert, was born June 4, 1874, in Brighton, Mich. He received a thorough education in the public schools of his native state; and graduated from the Michigan Agricultural College. He is a successful electrical engineer of Philadelphia, Pa.; and for a number of years was engaged as a draftsman. He is now an electrical expert in the United States navy, with headquarters in Philadelphia, Pa.

BROOKS, MARTHA WASHINGTON, educator, was born July 25, 1842, in Scituate, Mass. She was educated in the public schools of New England; and graduated from the Bridgewater Normal School. For many years she has been engaged in educational work in Massachusetts; has been a member of the school committee; and has filled the position of clerk in the Savings Bank of Rockland, Mass.

BROOKS, MICAH, educator, jurist, congressman, was born in 1775 in Cheshire, Conn. He was a justice of the peace in 1806, and for twenty years thereafter was a county judge. He was a member of the New York Assembly in 1808 and 1809; and was a Representative in Congress from New York from 1815 to 1817. He was a member of the state constitutional convention of 1821; and a presidential elector in 1824. He died July 7, 1857, in Livingston County, N. Y.

BROOKS, NATHAN COVINGTON, educator, author, was born Aug. 12, 1819, in Maryland. He is a prominent educator of Baltimore, who, besides publishing an excellent series of classical text-books, chief among which are editions of Ovid's Metamorphoses and Virgil's Aeneid; is the author of A Complete History of the Mexican War. He died Oct. 6, 1898, in Philadelphia, Pa.

BROOKS, NEWTON M., soldier, public official, was born Jan 29, 1843, in Philadelphia, Pa. He was educated in his native city and at the University at Lewisburg. During the Civil war he was a Captain of Volunteers. He then entered the United States postoffice department; in 1884 was made chief clerk of the office of foreign mails; and is now superintendent. In 1891 he was a delegate of the United States at the Postal Congress at Vienna, a delegate at Washington in 1897; and a delegate in 1900 at Berne, Switzerland.

BROOKS, NOAH, author, was born Oct. 24, 1830, in Castine, Maine. During 1861-65 he was a war correspondent. He is a writer of popular books of boys; and the author of The Boy Emigrants; The Fairport Nine; Our Baseball Club; Abraham Lincoln; The Boy Settlers; American Statesmen; Tales of the Maine Coast; Abraham Lincoln and the Downfall of Slavery; How the Republic Is Governed; Short Studies in American Party Politics; Washington in Lincoln's Time, a volume of gossiping recollections; The Mediterranean Trip; The Story of Marco Polo; and Life of General Henry Knox.

BROOKS, PERCIVAL CUSHING, chemist, was born July 29, 1878, in South Scituate, now known as Norwell, Mass. He received the rudiments of his education in the public schools of Brocton, Mass.; and graduated with the degree of B. Sc. from the Massachusetts Agricultural College; and also received the same degree from the Boston University. He is a noted chemist and foreman of chemical processes; has been assistant chemist of departments of nitric acid, muriatic acid, zinc chloride; and is now assistant chemist and foreman of the sodium sulphide department of the General Chemical Company at Hegewisch, Ill. He is a son of Samuel Joseph May Brooks.

BROOKS, PHILLIPS, clergyman, bishop, author, was born Dec. 13, 1835, in Boston, Mass. He was the sixth Protestant Episcopal bishop of Massachusetts. He was rector of Holy Trinity church at Philadelphia in 1862-69; and of Trinity church, Boston, from 1869 until his consecration as bishop in 1891. He was a leader of broad church opinion, but had no hostility towards forms of thought opposed to his. For many years before his death he had been accounted the foremost preacher in America. He was the author of The Influence of Jesus; Lectures on Preaching; The Candle of the Lord and Other Sermons; The Light of the World and Other Sermons; Sermons in English Churches; Twenty Sermons; Sermons for the Principal Festivals and Fasts; Tolerance; A Century of Church Growth in Boston; Essays and Addresses; Letters of Travel; and The Oldest School in America. O Little Town of Bethlehem is a popular poem by him: He died Jan. 23, 1893, in Boston, Mass.

BROOKS, PRESTON S., soldier, congressman, was born in August, 1819, in Edgefield district, S. C. He was a State Representative in 1814; in 1846 raised a company of volunteers, was made captain, was elected to Congress in 1853, and again in 1855. In 1856 he made a personal assault upon Charles Sumner in the United States Senate chamber, which event caused much excitement throughout the country. He died Jan. 27, 1857, in Washington, D. C.

BROOKS, R. F., business man, salesman, was born Oct. 22, 1876, in Emmerton, Richmond County, Va. He was educated in the public schools of his native state; and graduated from Emmerton Academy. For several years he has been engaged in mercantile pursuits; and is now a traveling salesman of Currie, N. C.

BROOKS, RAYMOND CUMMINGS, educator, clergyman, was born Sept. 26, 1869, in Tabor, Fremont County, Iowa. He was educated at Tabor College, at Oberlin College, and Yale University. In 1895-96 he was professor of Psychology and Ethics at Tabor College, Iowa. In 1896-1900 he was pastor of the Congregational Church of Eugene, Oregon; and since 1900 has been pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational Church of Oakland, Cal.

BROOKS, RICHARD PLEASANT, business man, banker, financier, was born July 15, 1854, in Butt's County, Ga. He was educated in the public schools of his native state; and graduated from the Hilliard Institute. He has been president of the Head Banking Company; vice-president of the First National Bank of Forsyth, Ga.; president of the Trio Manufacturing Company of Forsyth, Ga.; and treasurer of the Upson Manufacturing Company of Waynmanville, Ga. He has always been prominently identified with the business and public affairs of his city, county and state; and has filled numerous positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, ROBERT EDWARD LEE, business man, real estate dealer, was born July 6, 1869, in Jefferson County, Ky. He was educated in the public schools of his native state; and is now a successful real estate dealer of Chicago, Ill.

BROOKS, ROELIF HASBROUCK, clergyman, was born June 26, 1875, in Poughkeepsie, N. Y. He received a thorough education; and graduated from Columbia University. He is an eminent clergyman of Brooklyn, N. Y.; and has been curate to St. Michael's, and curate to the Church of the Messiah of that city.

BROOKS, SAMUEL J. M., business man, was born June 30, 1853, in Norwell, Mass. He was educated in the public schools of New England; and graduated from Hanover Academy. He is a successful business man and undertaker of Brockton, Mass.; for twenty-five years was connected with Howard Clark and Company; and has filled several positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, SAMUEL L., farmer, merchant, was born Sept. 21, 1858, near Sharon, Ga. He received a thorough education; attended the Beman School of Mt. Zion, Ga.; and graduated from the Georgia State University. He is a successful farmer and merchant of Washington, Ga.; and for many years prominently identified with the business and public affairs of that city.

BROOKS, SAMUEL LINUS, merchant, capitalist, public official, was born, Nov. 8, 1830, in Burton, Geauga County, Ohio. He was educated in Illinois and Oregon, whence he removed in 1859. For thirty years he was a successful merchant, but has now retired from active business. He has held responsible positions; and was in the Internal Revenue Department during President Lincoln's administration. He is now an Observer in the service of the Weather Bureau in connection with the Department of Agriculture at The Dalles, Wasco County, Oregon; and has filled numerous other positions of trust and honor. In 1660 his great-great-grandfather came from Cheshire, England; and subsequently laid out the town and named it Cheshire, Conn. His great-grandfather, Jonathan Brooks, served in the Revolutionary War. His grandfather, Jonathan Brooks, moved from Connecticut to Ohio, in 1778. His father, Linus Brooks, moved to Illinois in 1838; to Oregon in 1850; was a prominent figure in the early building of Oregon; and the town of Brooks, situated near the Capital of Oregon, bears his name.

BROOKS, SHEPHERD, business man, capitalist, was born in 1837, in Baltimore, Md. He received a thorough preparatory and academic education; and in 1857 graduated with high honors from Harvard College. For many years he has been prominently identified with the business and public affairs of New England; and has been president and director of various large corporations and business enterprises, principally in Boston, Mass. He is a member of various clubs and societies; and has filled numerous positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, STANLEY HOMER, physician, surgeon, was born June 15, 1864, in Downingtown, Meigs County, Ohio. He was educated in the public schools; and graduated from the Medical Department of the University of Kansas City, Mo. He is a successful physician of Mound City, Kan.; and a member of the leading medical societies.

BROOKS, STEPHEN DRIVER, physician, surgeon, was born Nov. 23, 1853, in Salem, Mass. He received a thorough education; and has attained success as a noted physician and surgeon. He is now surgeon of the United States Public Health and Marine Hospital Service; and is connected with the Marino Hospital Sanitarium at Fort Stanton, New Mexico.

BROOKS, STEPHEN HOSKINS, clergyman, was born March 22, 1842, in Dalton, Ga. In 1862-65 he served in the Twentieth Texas Cavalry, Confederate Army. Since 1865 he has been actively engaged in the Baptist Ministry; for five years he was Moderator of the Rehoboth Baptist Association; and now fills a pastorate in Winnsboro, Texas. His father, Rev. Asbury Brooks, was a member of the Holston Conference. His grandfather, Rev. Stephen Brooks, was a noted pioneer Methodist preacher of Tennessee; and was president of the Convention that made the first Constitution of that state of Tennessee.

BROOKS, W. B., clergyman, financial agent, was born Jan. 26, 1859, in Hart County, Ky. He was educated in the public schools of his native state; and attended the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary of Louisville, Ky. He is an eminent minister of the Baptist Church; and now fills a pastorate in Sturgis, Ky. He has been financial agent of the Ohio Valley College of Sturgis, Ky.; and has filled other positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, WALTER AUGUSTUS, clergyman, was born Aug. 2, 1849, in Leroy, N. Y. He graduated from the High School of Peoria, Ill.; in 1872 he graduated from the University of Michigan; and in 1875 graduated from the Union Theological Seminary. He is an eminent clergyman of the Presbyterian Church; and since 1875 has been pastor of the Prospect Street Presbyterian Church of Trenton, N. J. He is prominently identified with the affairs of his denomination; and has contributed extensively to religious literature during the past quarter of a century.

BROOKS, WALTER F., business man, treasurer, was born Jan. 13, 1859, in Worcester, Mass. He was educated in the public schools of New England; and is now treasurer of the Royal Worcester Corset Company of Worcester, Mass. For many years he has been identified with the business and public affairs of his native city; and has filled several positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, WILEY W., business man, public official, was born Aug. 5, 1848, in Pike County, Ala. He was educated in the public schools of his native state; and graduated from the High School of Greenville, Ala. He is a successful carpenter and business man of China Grove, Ala.; and prominently identified with the business and public affairs of that city. He has served his city as a Justice of the Peace; and has filled several other positions of trust and honor.

BROOKS, WILLIAM EUSTIS, soldier, clergyman, was born June 6, 1835, in Kingfield, Maine. He was educated in Blonfield Academy, of Maine; at Colby University; and at Yale Theological Seminary. He has filled pastorates in Connecticut, Chicago, and Benton Harbor, Mich.; and now fills a pastorate in Warren, Conn. During the Civil war he attained the rank of First Lieutenant and Captain in the Sixteenth Regiment Maine Volunteer Infantry. He has received the degrees of A. M. and D. D.; has been president of the County Institute; and has filled various positions of trust and honor in the religious and educational world.

BROOKS, WILLIAM GRANT, educator, organist, composer, author, poet, was born Feb. 26, 1869, in Saco, Maine. He was educated in the public schools of New England. He is the author of a number of songs that have become popular throughout the United States; and many of his poems have been incorporated into several standard works. He is a good musician, and for many years was organist in the Universalist Church of Biddeford, Maine. He is one of the most prominent members of the Maine Grand Lodge of Good Templars; has been Past Chancellor in the Knights of Pythias; and is an Odd Fellow. He is the author of an illustrated volume of poems entitled Stories in Song and Other Poems.

BROOKS, WILLIAM HOMER, clergyman, editor, was born Sept. 12, 1864, in Triangle, Boone County, N. Y. He was ed-educated at Cook Academy; in 1889 graduated from the University of Rochester; and in 1892 graduated from the Rochester Theological Seminary. He is an eminent minister of the Baptist Church; and has filled pastorates in Bozeman and Dillon, Montana; and for nine years at Belleville, N. Y. He now fills a pastorate in Watkins, N. Y. For two years he was editor of The Montana Baptist Record; and is a constant contributor to American Literature.

BROOKS, WILLIAM IRWIN, clergyman, was born Sept. 28, 1854, in Logan County, Ohio. He received the rudiments of his education in the public schools of his native state; attended Geneva College; and graduated from the United Presbyterian Theological Seminary at Xenia, Ohio. He has filled pastorates in Emporia and Milltonvale, Kans., and at Pawnee City and Kenesaw, Neb. He now fills a pastorate in Superior, Neb.; and contributes valuable articles to religious and educational press publications.

BROOKS, WILLIAM KEITH, naturalist, author, was born March 25, 1848, in Cleveland, Ohio. He is a professor of Zoology at Johns Hopkins University; and the author of Hand-Book of Invertebrate Zoology; Development of the American Oyster; Lucifer, a Study in Morphology; Development of Lingula; The Law of Heredity; and The Foundation of Zoology.

BROOKS, WILLIAM MILES, keeper of lighthouse, was born Feb. 2, 1863, in Kittery Point, Maine. He is keeper of lights at the Isles of Shoals Light Station in New Hampshire.

BROOKS, WILLIAM MYRON, educator, clergyman, legislator, was born March 5, 1835, in Laporte, Ohio. He graduated from Oberlin College; and has received the degrees of A. M. and D. D. In 1857-66 he was principal of Tabor Literary Institute; and in 1866-96 was the president of Tabor College of Iowa. In 1860-65 he was also Superintendent of Schools for Fremont County, Iowa; and in 1868 was president of the Iowa State Teachers' Association. He is also a clergyman of the Congregational Church; has been twice Moderator of the Iowa State Congregational Association; and nine times was a member of the National Council of Congregational Churches. In 1876-78 he was a member of the Iowa State Legislature; in 1876 was Republican presidential elector; and in 1891-98 was president of the Tabor and Northern Railway.

BROOKS, WILLIAM PENN, physician, surgeon, lecturer, author, was born in 1837, in Cook, Conneaut Township, Pa. He was educated in the public schools of his native state; attended Alleghany College; and in 1881 graduated in Medicine from the Western Homœopathic College of Cleveland, Ohio. He has a general practice in Cook, Johnson County, Neb.; and is prominently identified with the business and public affairs of his community. He is also quite a successful lecturer; has contributed extensively to current literature; and is the author of several works.

BROOKS, WILLIAM PENN, educator, botanist, college president, was born Nov. 19, 1851, in Nofwell, Plymouth County, Mass. He was educated at private academies; graduated from the Massachusetts Agricultural College with the degree of B. S.; and received the degree of Ph. D. from the University of Halle, Germany. In 1877-89 he was professor of agriculture and botany in Japan; and in 1880-83 and 1886-87 was president of the Agricultural College in that country. Since 1889 he has been professor of agriculture in the Massachusetts Agricultural College at Amherst. He is the author of a number of valuable monographs; and has contributed extensively to American Literature.

BROOKS, WILLIAM ROBERT, astronomer, lecturer, was born June 11, 1844, in Maidstone, England. He invented various improvements in astronomical, photographic, and other scientific instruments. In 1870 he settled in Phelps, N. Y., where in 1874 he founded and became the director of the Red House Observatory. In 1888 he removed to Geneva, N. Y., to take charge of Smith Observatory. His work has consisted largely in the discovery of comets, and thirteen of these bodies have been credited to him since 1881. Seven medals have been conferred upon him.

All proper names had originally a peculiar and appropriate meaning. Some persons might feel disposed to argue that there is nothing in the ordinary course of things to prevent the giving of names from sheer whim and without any meaning; but it is quite as difficult to imagine the absence of motive and of fixed guiding principles in the choice of a name as it is in any other matter. It would be contrary to Man's nature to denote the object of his thoughts by sounds which produce no impression upon his memory, no representative idea in his mind. If the principle asserted, then, hold good in the matter of common nouns, much more must it be true with regard to the proper name, whose characteristic is, as we have said, that it places under our very eyes as it were, the individual object to which it is applied.

That some definite idea should belong to the name when uttered, is so much needed by men in general that the natives of North America are in the habit of giving a name selected from their own language to any stranger deemed worthy of their especial notice. To them his own name does not sufficiently describe him, because it probably conveys no idea connected with his physical appearance. An anecdote is related of the Imaum of Muscat who when about to appoint a private physician asked his name. "Vincenzo," was the physician's reply. Not understanding it, the prince requested that its meaning should be explained in Arabic. The Italian gave the meaning, as Mansour, or Victorious, and the prince delighted with the happy omen offered by the name, ever after called him "Sheik Mansour."

If we glance next at the records of travellers in distant countries, we shall find that whether they be private individuals or men engaged in scientific inquiry, they never give a name to a people, a country, an island, or an unknown rock, without some definite reason. Some allusion is made in it to physical conformation, to dress, to customs, to external peculiarities, or to certain circumstances which made the discovery a remarkable one. This natural habit has rarely been deviated from except when a desire has been felt to erect some geographical monument on distant shores, in honor of some denizen of the heavens; or to record, in a lasting form, some contemporary event, or the name of some contemporary character of distinction; or, lastly, to perpetuate the memory of a benefactor of his kind, and to testify of a nation's gratitude to a fellow-countryman of great pre-eminence. The long catalogue of proper names, with a meaning, which may yet be found among our older nations, in spite of mixture and corruption of races; and the longer catalogue disclosed by etymological inquiry, fully bear out these remarks. Schegel, a very learned philosopher, has traced descriptive epithets in almost all Hindoo names. So marked was the existence of these meanings among the Hebrews, that their literature is strangely tinged by their influence. The older names among the Arabs, and those since introduced into general use, are highly significative; the face is acknowledged in the case of Grecian names, and the remark is equally true of all names derived from Teutonic origin. The most distant nations in our own more immediate circle of civilization exhibit no difference in this respect. Most of the natives of North America are named after some animal; during their lifetime they receive another title when they have earned it by some deed of daring, which it explains and of which it is the token. The name of a most powerful chief in one of the Marquesas Islands, contains an allusion to the shape of a canoe, in the management of which he excelled. Thunder is the name of the King of the Chenooks, a warlike tribe who live on the left bank of the river Columbia. The Kamtchadales, Koriakes, and Kuriles, have all of them significant names.

SURNAMES.

In the first ages of the world a single name was sufficient for each individual; and that name was generally invented for the person, in allusion to the circumstances attending his birth, or to some personal quality he possessed, or which his parents fondly hoped he might in future possess.

Christian names being given in infancy, and by friends and relatives, cannot, as a general rule, have had significations, or be associated with crime or misfortune. It is otherwise, however, with surnames. These will be found to be of all shades, from the best to the worst, the most pleasing to the most ridiculous. They originated later in life, after the character and habits of the individual had been formed, and after he had engaged in some permanent occupation, trade, or pursuit. They were given by the community in which he dwelt—by enemies as well as by friends.

The first approach to the modern system of nomenclature is found in the assumption of the name of One's Sire in addition to his own proper name: as Caleb the son of Jephunnah. Sometimes the adjunct expressed the country or profession of the bearer; sometimes some excellence or blemish; as Diogenes the Cynic; or Dionysius the Tyrant.

A mother's name, that of a parent, or of some remoter ancestor more illustrious than the father, have in the same way been used to form new names. A like attention has been paid to sentiments of friendship and gratitude. Sometimes the wife's name became the husband's surname. The name of the tribe or people to which a man belonged might also become a surname. If any particular name described the locality of a man's residence or property, it may serve the same purpose. Personal acts and qualities have given rise to a great variety of surnames.

Surnames are traceable to several chief sources. There will be seen evidences in physical and political geography that the designations of countries, mountains, rivers, districts, towns, villages, hamlets, are all associated with the names of persons whom we daily meet, suggesting to the thoughtful mind most interesting topics regarding the histories of families and places.

Though the majority of our ancient family names are territorial, we have many large classes of exceptions, and the origin of most of them is not at all doubtful.

Surnames can scarcely be said to have been permanently settled before the era of the Reformation. The keeping of parish registers was probably more instrumental than anything else in settling them; for if a person were entered under one name at baptism, it is not likely he would be married under another and buried under a third; in some instances, prior to the keeping of parish registers, persons were recorded as having different names at different periods of their life. As to the derivations of surnames, it should be remembered, that places were named before families. You have only to examine any of those names which serve for lands and also for persons, to see this plainly. If you found the name of Cruickshanks, or Prettyman, Black-mantle, or Great-head, you would not hesitate. These are evidently coined for persons, and you find no such names of land, or for the double purpose. But then you can have as little doubt that names like Church-hill, Green-hill, Hazel-wood, Sandi-lands, were first given to places; and when you find them borne both by land and persons, you will conclude the persons took them from the territories. In general then, when a place and a family have the same name it is the place that gives the name to the people, not the family to the place. This rule, which will not be disputed by any one who has bestowed some study or thought on the subject, has very few exceptions.

There is a class of fables, the invention of a set of bungling genealogists, who, by a process like that which heralds call canting—catching at a sound—pretend that the Douglasses had their name from a Gaelic word, said to mean a dark gray man, but which never could be descriptive of a man at all; that the Forbesees were at first called For beast, because they killed a great bear; that Dalzell is from a Gaelic word, meaning "I dare;" that the Guthries were so called from the homely origin of gutting three had-docks for King David the Second's entertainment, when he landed very hungry on the Brae of Bervie from his French voyage. These clumsy inventions of a late age, if they were really meant to be seriously credited, disappear when we find from record that there were very ancient territories, and even parishes, of Douglas, Forbes, Dalzell, and Guthrie, long before the names came into use as family surnames.

It was formerly customary to receive names from ancestors by compounding their name with a word indicating filial relationship. Names so compounded were termed patronymics, from Pater: father, and Onoma: a name—father being used in the sense of ancestor. When personal names merged into family appellations, patronymics became obsolete; or, more correctly, ceased to be formed. Before this change was effected, in case a man was called Dennis: born on the Day of St. Dennis, sometimes his eldest son would be called Dennison, which in some cases, became Tennyson; and a man from a village in which was a church dedicated to St. Dennis was called Dennistoun. After the period in which descriptive names flourished, each of his children, whether male or female, would be called Dennis, so that this became literally a patronymic, inasmuch as it was a name received from a father. Howbeit, only those names that were taken from a parent when such was not the rule are called patronymics. Personal names lead the van as to all others, and are the basis of half their successors. Long after personal names were almost as widely diffused as persons, we find patronymics coming into use, the offspring of necessity arising out of multiplicity.

But when we come to realize that nearly one-third of Englishmen were known either by the name of William or John about the year 1300, it will be seen that the pet name and nick form were no freak, but a necessity. We dare not attempt a category, but the surnames of to-day tell us much. Will was quite a distinct youth from Willot, Willot from Wilmot, Wilmot from Wilkin, and Wilkin from Wilcock. There might be half a dozen Johns about the farmstead, but it mattered little so long as one was called Jack, another Jenning, a third Jenkin, a fourth Jackcock (now Jacox as a surname), a fifth Brownjohn, and sixth Micklejohn, or Littlejohn, or Properjohn (i.e., well-built or handsome).

The first name looking like a patronymic is antediluvian, viz., Tubal-Cain: flowing out from Cain, as though O'Cain, given to intimate pride in relationship to Cain. During the Israelitish theocracy Gentile patronymics were in common use, as Hittites from Heth, but those personal came in later. As soon, however, as the New Testament opens we meet with Bar-Jonah, Bar-Abbas, names received from fathers in the conventional patronymical sense. It is, therefore, manifest that the chronology of patronymics, the period of their formation, lies about midway between primitive ages and time current.

COLUMBUS ANNOUNCING HIS DISCOVERY

The Saxons sometimes bestowed honorable appellations on those who had signalized themselves by the performance of any gallant action, like the Roman Cognomina. Every person conversant with the history of those times will call to mind that England was much infested with wolves, and that large rewards were given to such as were able by force or stratagem, to subdue them. To kill a wolf was to destroy a dangerous enemy, and to confer a benefit on society. Hence several Saxon proper names, ending in ulph and wolf, as Biddulph, the wolf-killer, or more properly "wolf-compeller," and some others; but these, among the common people at least, did not descend from father to son in the manner of modern surnames.

Another early species of surname adjunct is the epithet Great, as Alexander the Great; with words expressive of other qualities, as Edmund Iron-side, Harold Hare-foot; and among the kings of Norway there was a Bare-foot. France had monarchs named Charles the Bald, Louis the Stutterer, and Philip the Fair.

As society advanced more in refinement, partly for euphony, and partly for the sake of distinction, other names came into common use.

Modern nations have adopted various methods of distinguishing families. The Highlanders of Scotland employed the sirename with Mac, and hence our MacDonalds and Macartys, meaning respectively the son of Donald and of Arthur.

It would, however, be preposterous to imagine that surnames universally prevailed so early as the eleventh century. We have overwhelming evidence that they did not; and must admit that although the Norman Conquest did much to introduce the practice of using them, it was long before they became very common. The occasional use of surnames in England dates beyond the ingress of the Normans. Surnames were taken up in a very gradual manner by the great, (both of Saxon and Norman descent) during the eleventh, twelfth, and thirteenth centuries. By the middle of the twelfth, however, it appears that they were (in the estimation of some) necessary appendages to families of rank, to distinguish them from those of meaner extraction.

The unsettled state of surnames in those early times renders it a difficult matter to trace the pedigree of any family beyond the thirteenth century. In Cheshire, a county remarkable for the number of its resident families of great antiquity, it was very usual for younger branches of the family, laying aside the name of their father, to take their name from the place of their residences, and thus in three descents as many surnames are found in the same family. This remark may be forcibly illustrated by reference to the early pedigree of the family of Fitz-Hugh, which name did not settle down as a fixed appellative until the time of Edward III.

Although most towns have borrowed their names from their situation and other respects, yet with some apt termination have derived their names from men; as Edwardston and Alfredstone. But these were from forenames or christian names, and not from sire names; and even almost to the period of the conquest forenames of men were generally given as names of places.

The Normans are thought to have been the first to introduce the practice of fixed surnames among us, and certainly a little while before the conquest, some of these adventurers had taken family names from their chateaux in Normandy. "Neither is there any village in Normandy," says Camden, "that gave not denomination to some family in England." The French names introduced into England at the conquest may generally be known by the prefixes de, du, des, de la, st.; and by the suffixes font, ers, fant, deau, age, mont, ard, aux, bois, ly, eux, et, val, court, vaux, lay, fort, ot, champ, and dille, most of which are component parts of proper names of places, as every one may convince himself by the slightest glance at the map of Northern France. But that these Norman surnames had not been of long standing is very certain, for at the Conquest it was only one hundred and sixty years since the first band of Northmen rowed up the Seine, under their leader Hrolf, whom our history books honor with the theatrical name of Rollo, but who was known among his people as "Hrolf the Ganger."

But whether in imitation of the Norman lords, or from the great convenience of the distinction, the use of fixed surnames arose in France about the year 1000; came into England sixty years later, or with the Norman Conquest; and reached Scotland, speaking roundly, about the year 1100.

The first example of fixed surnames in any number in England, are to be found in the Conqueror's Valuation Book called Domesday. "Yet in England," again to quote the judicious Camden, "certain it is, that as the better sort, even from the Conquest, by little and little took surnames, so they were not settled among the common people fully until about the time of Edward the Second."

Those dashing Norman adventurers introduced to the British Isle the custom of chivalry and the surnames they had adopted from their paternal castles across the channel. They made a rage for knight-hood and turned the ladies' heads. An English princess declined to marry a suitor who "had not two names." Henry I wished to marry his natural son Robert to Mabel, one of the heiresses of Fitz-Hamon. The lady demurred:

"It were to me a great shame

To have a lord withouten his twa name."

Whereupon King Henry gave him the surname of Fitzroy, which means son of a king.

The era of fixed surnames does not rest only on the authority of Camden. It can be proved by a thousand records, English and Scotch. It is almost sufficiently proved when it can be shown the race of Stuart—already first of Scotch families in opulence and power, distinguished by no surnames for several generations after the Norman Conquest. Much later the ancestors of the princely line of Hamilton were known as Walter Fitz-Gilbert, and Gilbert Fitz-Walter, before it occurred to them to assume the name their kinsmen had borne in England. But surnames were undoubtedly first used in the twelfth century, and came into general use in the following one.

THE SAXON PATRONYMIC

Was formed by adding ing to the ancestor's name, as Ælfreding, which means Alfred's son; the plural for which is Ælfredingas.

THE ENGLISH PATRONYMIC,

Which is exceedingly common, is generally indicated by affixing son to the name of a progenitor, and is incapable of being used in a plural form or in the generic sense. For instance, Gibson, a son of Gibbs, a contraction for Gilbert. Munson, a son of Munn, a contraction of Edmund.

DE AND MAC

Are from the Latin word De, which means of. This is a Patronymical sign common to French, Italian, and even German names. Thus Deluc, which means of Luke. Dwight means of Wight; and De Foe means of the Faith.

FITZ.

Fitz stands for Filius, a son, and received through the Normans.

VAN AND VON.

Corresponding more or less closely with de, ac, is the Dutch van, and usually applied with the force of the, as Vandersteen, which means of the stone, hill, from which have sprung Folli, Fell, Kuox. Vanderfelde means of the field; Van Meter means living on hired land; and Vandeverer means of the ferry.

THE WELSH PATRONYMIC

Is a form of the Celtic means mac, which the Cambrian people made Mab or Map, and shortening it to a letter b, p, or its cognate f, gave it work to do as a patronymical prefix. Thus, Probart, son of Robert; Probyn, son of Robin; Blake, son of Lake; Bowen, son of Owen; Price, son of Rice or Rheese; Priddle, son of Riddle; and Prichard, son of Richard.

MILESIAK PATRONYMIC.

The Highlanders, Irish and Welsh hold mac in common. The Welsh delight to have it in the forms of mab, map, ap, hop, b, p, f. In Irish names mac tends toward mag, ma, and c. But Scotland took most lovingly to mac. The Milesians found a greater charm in Eoghan: a son, forming ua, and that used as O in the sense of eldest son, for he only was allowed to use it. The Irish developed a patronymic out of their Erse treasury more elastic and poetic than the Gaelic mac. The Celtic for young, offspring son, is, as above given, eoghan, whence Egan for Hugh, eoghan: son of Hugh; and also Flanagan, son of Flan.

THE GALLIC PATRONYMIC

Is mac, meaning a son; and O from eoghan, for a first-born son. The Gaels also had a patronymical affix derived from eoghan, known as ach, och, the source of our ock, as seen in hillock, which means little hill.

THE SPANISH AND PORTUGUESE PATRONYMIC

Is formed by az, or ez affixed. The two words are variations of the tail Filius, a son; as Alvarez, son of Alva; and Enriquez, son of Henry.

THE ITALIAN PATRONYMIC

Was sometimes formed by placing the name of a son before the name of his father, as Galileo Galilei, which means Galileo, the son of Galilei; Speron Speroni, which means Speron, the son of Speroni.

THE RUSSIAN PATRONYMIC

Is itch for a son; and of, ef or if for a grandson or descendant. Romanovitch Jouriff: son of Romain, grandson of Joury; and Romanoff, descended from Romain, son of Rome.

THE MODERN GREEK PATRONYMIC

Assumes the forms pulos, soula, as in the name Nicolopulos, son of Nicholas.

THE GERMAN, DUTCH, SWEDISH, AND LAPLAND PATRONYMIC

Are sohn, zen, sen, son, zoon, and dotter, such as Mendelssohn, son of Mendel; Thorwaldsen, son of Thorwald; and Larsdotter, son of Lars.

LITHUANIAN PATRONYMIC

Is aitis, ait or at, used as affix, thus, Adomaitis, meaning a son of Adam.

THE HINDOSTANEE PATRONYMICS

Is putra, added as an affix; as occurs in Rajaputra, son of a king.

THE CHINESE PATRONYMIC

Is tse, or se, used as an affix, as Kung-fut-se, which means Kung, the son of Fo; and Yang-tse-Kiang, river, son of the ocean.

THE LATIN PATRONYMIC

Is ilius, as Hostilius, son of Hostis.

THE GREEK PATRONYMIC

Is idas, modified to ida, ides, id, i, od. For instance, Aristides, son of Ariston.

THE HEBREW PATRONYMIC

Proper is ben, from the word Eben, a stone. The Chaldees used Bar in the sense of lofty, elevated, superior, which was primarily applied to eminence, and is identical with our Barr. As Barzillai, son of Zillai; Ben-Joseph, son of Joseph.

KIN.

The primary sense of kin seems to have been relationship: from thence family or offspring.

The next meaning acquired by kin was child, or "young one." We still speak in a diminutive sense of a manikin, kilderkin, pipkin, lambkin, jerkin, minikin (little Minion), or Doitkin.

Terminations in kin were slightly going down in popular estimation when the Hebrew invasion made a clean sweep of them. They found shelter in Wales, however, and directories preserve in their list of surnames their memorial forever.

In proof of the popularity of kin are the surnames of Simpkinson, Hopkins, Dickens, Dickinson, Watkins, Hawkins, Jenkinson, Atkinson, and all the rest. The patronymics ending in kins got abbreviated into kiss, kes, and ks. Hence the origin of our Perkes, Purkiss, Hawkes, and Hawks, Dawks, Jenks, Jukes, and Jukes (Judkins).

IN OR ON.

This diminutive, to judge from the Paris Directory, must have been enormously popular with the French. England's connection with Normandy and France generally brought the fashion to the English Court, and in habits of this kind the English folk quickly copied. Terminations in kin and cock were confined to the lower orders first and last. Terminations in on or in and ot or et, were the introduction of fashion, and being under patronage of the highest families in the land, naturally obtained a much wider popularity.

OT AND ET.

These are the terminations that ran first in favor for many generations.

This diminutive ot et is found in the English language in such words as poppet, jacket, lancet, ballot, gibbet, target, gigot, chariot, latchet, pocket, ballet. In the same way a little page became a paget, and hence among our surnames Smallpage, Littlepage, and Paget.

Coming to baptism, we find scarcely a single name of any pretensions to popularity that did not take to itself this desinence. The two favorite girl-names in Yorkshire previous to the Reformation were Matilda and Emma. Two of the commonest surnames there to-day are Emmott and Tillot, with such variations as Emmett and Tillet, Emmotson and Tillotson.

Of other girl-names we may mention Mabel, which from Mab became Mabbott; Douce became Doucett and Dowsett; Gillian or Julian, from Gill or Jill (whence Jack and Jill), became Gillot, Juliet, and Jowett; Margaret became Margett and Margott, and in the north Magot.

NAMES DERIVED FROM OCCUPATIONS AND PURSUITS.

After these local names "the most in number have been derived from Occupations or Professions."

The practice of borrowing names from the various avocations of life is of high antiquity. Thus the Romans had among them many persons, and those too of the highest rank, who bore such names as Figulus, Pietor, and Fabritius, answering to the Potters and Paynters, of our own times. These names became hereditary, next in order after the local names, about the eleventh and twelfth centuries. As local names generally had the prefix de or at, so these frequently had le, as Stephen le Spicer, and Walter le Boucher.

NAMES DERIVED FROM DIGNITIES, CIVIL AND ECCLESIASTICAL; AND FROM OFFICES.

The same principle which introduced surnames borrowed from trades and occupations led to the adoption of the names of dignities and offices, which also became hereditary; as Emperor, King, Prince, Duke, Earle, Pope, Bishop, Cardinal, etc.

SURNAMES DERIVED FROM PERSONAL AND MENTAL QUALITIES.

These seem to form one of the most obvious sources of surnames, and a prolific source it has been. Nothing would be more natural at the first assumption of surnames, than for a person of dark complexion to take the name of Black or Blackman, a tawny one that of Browne, and a pale one that of White or Whiteman. But it was not from the head alone that names of this description were taken, for we have, in respect of other personal qualities, our Longs and our Shorts, our Strongs and our Weaklys, and our Lightfoots and our Heavisides, with many more whose meaning is less obvious. Among the names indicative of mental or moral qualities, we have our Hardys and Cowards, our Livelys and our Sullens, our Brisks and our Doolittles; and Brainhead, which later became Brainerd.

SURNAMES DERIVED FROM CHRISTIAN NAMES.

Everybody must have remarked the great number of names of this kind. Who does not immediately call to mind some score or two of the name of Edwards, Johnson, Stevens, and Harrison, in the circle of his acquaintance. Many of the christian forenames of our ancestors were taken up without any addition or change, as Anthony, Andrew, Abel, Baldwin, Donald, etc. Others have been corrupted in various ways, as Bennet from Benedict, Cutbeard from Cuthbert, Stace from Ustace.

NAMES FROM MANORS AND SMALLER ESTATES.

The surnames from these sources are almost innumerable. There is scarcely a city, town, village, manor, hamlet, or estate, in England, that has not lent its name to swell the nomenclature of Englishmen.

SURNAMES FROM VARIOUS THINGS.

We find the names of the heavenly bodies, beasts, birds, fishes, insects, plants, fruits, flowers, metals, etc., very frequently borne as surnames; as Sun, Moon, Star, Bear, Buck, Chicken, Raven, Crab, Cod, Bee, Fly, Lily, Primrose, Orange, Lemon, Gold, Silver, etc.

SURNAMES FROM THE SOCIAL RELATIONS, PERIODS OF AGE, TIME, ETC.

There are several surnames derived from consanguinity, alliance, and from other social relations, originating, from there having been two or more persons bearing the same christian name in the same neighborhood; as Fader, Brothers, Cousins, Husbands; and closely connected with the foregoing are the names derived from periods of age, as Young, Younger, Eld, Senior. From periods of time we have several names, as Spring, Summer, Winter. The following surnames may also find a place here: Soone, Later, Latter, Last, Quickly.

A CABINET OF ODDITIES.

There are a good many surnames which seem to have originated in sheer caprice, as no satisfactory reason for their assumption can be assigned. It is doubtful, indeed, if they were ever assumed at all, for they have very much the appearance of what, in these days, we are accustomed to call nicknames or sobriquets, and were probably given by others to the persons who were first known by them, and so identified with those persons that neither they nor their immediate posterity could well avoid them. To this family belong the names borrowed from parts of the human figure, which are somewhat numerous; as Pate, Skull, Cheek, Neck, Side, Naailes, Heele, etc. Then there is another set of names not much less ridiculous, namely those borrowed from coins, and denominations of money, as Farthing, Money, Penny. Besides these we have from the weather, Frost, Tempest, and Fogg; from sports, Bowles, Cards; from vessels and their parts, Forecastle, Ship; from measures, Peck, Inches; from numbers, Six, Ten.

It is really remarkable that many surnames expressive of bodily deformity or moral turpitude should have descended to the posterity of those who perhaps well deserved and so could not escape them, when we reflect how easily such names might have been avoided in almost every state of society by the simple adoption of others; for although in our day it is considered an act of villainy, or at least a "suspicious affair," to change one's name unless in compliance with the will of a deceased friend, when an act of the senate or the royal sign-manual is required, the case was widely different four or five centuries ago, and we know from ancient records that names were frequently changed at the caprice of the owners. Names of this kind are very numerous, such as, Bad, Silly, Outlaw, Trash, etc.

NAMES DERIVED FROM VIRTUES AND OTHER ABSTRACT IDEAS.

To account for such names as Justice, Virtue, Prudence, Wisdom, Liberty, Hope, Peace, Joy, Anguish, Comfort, Want, Pride, Grace, Laughter, Luck, Peace, Power, Warr, Ramson, Love, Verity, Vice, Patience, etc., they undoubtedly originated in the allegorical characters who performed on the ancient mysteries or moralities; a specie of dramatics pieces, which before the rise of the genuine drama served to amuse under the pretext of instructing the play-goers of the "olden tyme."

FOREIGN NAMES NATURALIZED IN ENGLAND.

Various causes might be assigned for the variety that exists in the nomenclature of Englishmen. Probably the principal cause is to be found in the peculiar facilities which that island had for many ages presented to the settlement of foreigners. War, royal matches with foreign princesses, the introduction of manufactures from the continent, and the patronage which that country has always extended to every kind of foreign talent—all have of course tended to introduction of new names.

CHANGED SURNAMES.

The practice of altering one's name upon the occurrence of any remarkable event in one's personal history, seems to have been known in times of very remote antiquity. The substitution of Abraham for Abram, Sarah for Sarai, etc., are matters of sacred history. In France it was formerly customary for eldest sons to take their father's surnames, while the younger branches assumed the names of the states allotted them. This plan also prevailed in England sometime after the Norman Conquest.

In the United States they carry this system of corrupting or contracting names to a ridiculous extent. Barnham is Barnum; Farnham (fern ground) Farnum; Killham (kiln house or home), Killum; Birkham (birch house) Birkum, and so forth with similar names. Pollock becomes Polk; Colquhoun becomes Calhoun; and M'Candish becomes M'Candless.

HISTORICAL SURNAMES.

By an historical surname is meant a name which has an illusion to some circumstance in the life of the person who primarily bore it. Thus Sans-terre or Lack-land, the by-name of King John, as having relation to one incident in that monarch's life, might be designated an historical surname. To this class of surnames also, belongs that of Nestling, borne by a Saxon earl, who in his infancy, according to Verstegan, had been rescued from an eagle's nest.

TRANSLATED NAMES.

During the middle ages the Latin language was the language of literature and politics; accordingly in history and in the public records proper names had to assume a Latin form. The change was not always a happy one. Authors were obliged to change their own names as well as the names of the persons they celebrated in either prose or verse. The history of France was still written in Latin in the seventeenth century, all names consequently recorded in Latin. In the sixteenth century the Germans used to translate them into Greek. The absurdity which it entailed undoubtedly hastened the disappearance of the custom.

The chiefs of an American tribe in North America receive a new name when they have earned it by their exploits.

A similar practice prevails in various negro tribes.

The Greeks, in olden times, used to change their names on the smallest pretense, and with the greatest indifference.

The emperors of Japan and those of China after their death receive a new name.

ON THE CHANGING OF NAMES.

With us a woman changes her name when she marries; among the Caribs of the Antilles it was the custom for husband and wife to exchange names. In some formerly, and at the present day in Cape Verd Islands, a liberated slave takes the name of his old master; the adopted person substitutes the name of the person who adopts him for his own; the law allows that a donor or testator may require that his name should be taken by the person benefited.

In 1568 Philip enacted a law that the Moors who lived in Spain should abandon the use of their peculiar idiom, and of their national names and surnames, and substitute in their stead Spanish idioms and Spanish names. He hoped to make new men of them, to denationalize them, if we may use the term, and to merge them into his own people. He had a keen appreciation of the value of proper names, but like all despotic sovereigns, he was blind to the influence of time, which can alone produce the gradual fusion of a conquering with a conquered people, more especially when differences in religion add their overwhelming weight to one side of the balance.

The Moors obeyed, but still retained their national feelings and religious beliefs; later, however, when they were compelled to choose between exile on the one hand, and apostacy on the other, they returned to their old country, and carried back with them a number of Spanish names. Accordingly, in several Mauritanian families descended from the Andalusian Mussulmans, we still find the names of Perez, Santiago, Valenciano, Aragon, etc., names which have sometimes led European authors into error, and made them fancy they saw apostates from Christianity among the descendants of the martyrs of Islamism.

The robbers whose trade it was to carry men away and sell them as slaves, needed no legal compulsion to change the names of their slaves. The precaution which they naturally took in this matter baffled the researches of disconsolate parents, who could only endeavor to recover their lost children by a description which was always imperfect and always uncertain.

In modern times the same system has been adopted, although it has not been dictated by equally prudential motives. The laws of Christian Europe have even in our own times legalized the sale of slaves. As soon as a negro had landed in the colonies it was usual for his purchaser to give him a new name.

HEREDITARY NAMES.

In England the middle classes acquired a decidedly important political influence as early as the year 1258, or not later than 1264, the quarrels of the nobles and the king having opened the road to Parliament for the representatives of the commons. Moreover, an act that no tax should be levied without the consent of their representatives was passed before the year 1300, and accordingly, soon after that date, we find hereditary names commonly used in the middle classes.

For a contrary reason the change cannot have taken place in Germany until a much later period. In order to prove this, an instance is given which will be all the more conclusive from its being connected with an intermediate point between that country and France. In the town of Metz, which in idiom and by union with the dominions of the descendants of Clovis and Charlemagne, was decidedly French, but which for thirty years had been Germanized in consequence of its political position, you might have noticed at the close of the thirteenth century that its chief magistrates, who were all knights, bore without exception individual or derived surnames instead of family surnames. When we say derived, we mean either from the place in which they lived, or from the post which their military duties obliged them to occupy. It was not until the close of the latter half of the fourteenth century that hereditary names became common among men who were high in office, so that among their inferiors it is only fair to infer that they were rarer still.

The etymology of hereditary names in England and in Germany is generally the same as in France and Italy. The following remarks will embody the inferences to be drawn from their examination, for the use of philologists. In languages of Teutonic origin, when descent is implied merely, the word son is placed after the father's name; such is the derivation of all the family names in the languages of Sweden, Denmark, Germany, and England, which terminate in this way. There are some exceptions, such as Ferguson and Owenson, which serve to corroborate the statement as to the possibility of the union of two languages to form one and the same proper name; in the instances quoted above, a Saxon termination is joined to a Caledonian or a Welsh name.

Attention has already been drawn to the custom of giving the father's name, in the genitive case, to the son as a surname. The addition of a final s in English, and of the syllable ez in Spain, sufficed to change Christian prænomena into surnames, and afterwards into family names; Peters, Williams, Richards, Henriquez, Lopez, Fernandez, literally (son) of Peter, of William, of Richard, of Henry, of Lope (or Wolf), of Fernando or Ferdinand.

D'Andre, Dejean, Depierre, have probably become family names in France in a similar way. The name of the writer who was perhaps the keenest appreciator of the genius of the immortal Dante that ever lived, Giuseppe di Cesare, shows that a similar form was not foreign to Italian customs.

As in Italy, so also in the greater part of Europe, the practice of drawing up deeds and charters in Latin was almost universal, and in these the son was designated by his father's name in the genitive case, hence we must attribute all the names which are characterized by such a termination to this custom. Such names, for instance, as Fabri, Jacobi, Simonis, Johannis, etc., names which would be multiplied without end if other languages had retained the old Latin termination like the Italian. The countries where the greatest number will be found will be those (it may be quite safely conjectured) where the custom of writing legal documents in Latin prevailed the longest:

Somewhat similar in Wales, the sign of descent, or rather of sonship, led to the formation of surnames, which later again became hereditary names. The word "ab," when placed between two names, expresses descent, Rhys ab Evan (Rhys, the son of Evan); the vowel is gradually lost in common use, and the name becomes Rhys Evan, and, according to the same rule, successively takes the form of the following patronymics, Bowen, Pruderrech, Price.

It is still the same theory, only more simply carried out, which regulated the formation of family names in Ireland and in Scotland. As soon as the head of a clan had adopted some hereditary name, that name was given to all his vassals, whatever rank they might happen to occupy, and however remotely connected they might be by ties of kindred with the head of the clan, and further, even though they had only entered it by enfranchisement or by adoption. The feeling of pride which suggested such a system is by no means an offensive one; we excuse it on the ground of its similarity to the old patriarchal customs; the head of the clan who is so powerful, and such an object of reverence, is but the eldest brother of a large family, and the name which he takes belongs to all its members.

It will not be quite so easy to discover a reason for the feeling of vanity which in Spain and in Portugal led to such a tedious multiplicity of names. Birthplace, or the customary home, are not considered sufficient for a full description of a lordly title; alliances, adoptions, and the like, were all dragged in to increase the number of names. An ignorant phase of devotional feeling added to its proportionate share to their Christian prænomia; it may, therefore, be easily inferred what needless confusion must have arisen in the ordinary transactions of life through this two-fold prodigality of names.

As the nobles in Sweden had not adopted hereditary names before the close of the sixteenth century, it followed as a matter of course that the middle classes did not use them until a still later period. The choice of names which this latter class made is worthy of notice. We know many names in France which indicate occupations, such as Draper, Miller, Barber, Maker, Slater, Turner,* etc. The same may be found in England, but not in the same quantity; the oldest English commoners were freeholders of land rather than either merchants or manufacturers. There are few if any such, in Sweden; the greater part of their names are the names of properties, or of farms, or of forests, and were of that character because they were selected by a class who wished to approximate to the nobles by imitating their ways, and consequently not because they were the result of a need for distinctive signs—a need which is totally distinct from any individual wish or caprice.

*Mercier, Meunier, Barbier, Boulanger, Couvreur, Tourneur.

In Holstein and in Courland there are still many families who have no names peculiarly their own. In this instance, again, the scourge of feudalism is felt in all its severity.

ORIGIN OF OUR FAMILY.

Whatever concerns the origin of our family—from whom proceeded the sturdy men that planted our infant states has for all of us an especial charm, not only from what we know, but for what we hope to ascertain.

Our ancestors, tracing back their lineage to Pict and Dane, to the legionaries of Rome, or to the sea kings of the Baltic, had gained strength from the fusion in their nature of various and opposing elements, and combined what was best of many races.

That our ancestors were fond of fighting when provoked, regardless of personal safety or private advantage, cannot be denied. For the five centuries following the conquest, wars at home and abroad succeeded with little cessation. Military duty was incumbent on all who could bear arms. Personal encounters between knight and squire in mail with lance and battle axe, the rest in quilted doublets, with pike and bow, made men indifferent to danger, and induced habits of hardihood and daring.

ORIGIN OF THE SURNAME.

According to some authorities the history of mankind began with Adam and Eve about six thousand years ago; and that their descendants spread over Asia first, then over Africa, and then over Europe. But science clearly points that the world and its inhabitants in some form must have existed for millions of years.

It took primitive man four thousand years to learn how to make a hole in a stone, insert a stick in it, and use it for a weapon. Then he became master of the forest, with power readily to provide himself with meat-food. From fisherman and hunter man developed into a herder of flocks, a tiller of the soil, a cultivator of grain. Then came attachment to the family and the growth of the family into clans and nations.

The first historical record is dated about three thousand seven hundred years ago, when a man by the name of Inachus led a very large company of emigrants from Egypt into Greece. These found that country inhabited by savages, who no doubt, were the descendants of those who had wandered there from Asia.

Inachus and his companies established themselves in Greece, and from that point of time Europe gradually became occupied by civilized people.

Thus three quarters of the globe, Asia Africa and Europe, were settled. But America was separated from Asia by the Pacific Ocean, almost ten thousand miles across; and from Europe and Africa by the Atlantic, about three thousand miles across. Of America in ancient times people knew nothing.

The ships in olden times were small and feeble; and navigators seldom dared to stretch forth upon the boundless sea. Even the mariner's compass, that mysterious but steadfast friend of the sailor was not used by the Europeans until 1250.

THE FIRST SETTLEMENTS.

It was in the year 1607 that the first emigrants, to successfully form a permanent colony, landed in Virginia. For twelve years after its settlement it languished under the government of Sir Thomas Smith, Treasurer of the Virginia Company in England. The Colony was ruled during that period by laws written in blood; and its history shows us how the narrow selfishness of such a despotic power would counteract the very best efforts of benevolence. The colonist suffered an extremity of distress too horrible to be described.

Of the thousands of emigrants who had been sent to Virginia at great cost, not one in twenty remained alive in April, 1619, when Sir George Yeardley arrived. He bought certain commissions and instructions from the company for the "Better establishing of a commonwealth here," and the prosperity of Virginia began from this time, when it received, as a commonwealth, the freedom to make laws for itself. The first meeting was held July 30, 1619—more than a year before the Mayflower, with the pilgrims, left the harbor of Southampton.

The first colony established by the Plymouth Company in 1607, on the coast of Maine, was a lamentable failure.

The permanent settlement of New England began with the arrival of a body of Separatists in the Mayflower in 1620, who founded the colony of Plymouth.

The Separatists' migration from England was followed in a few years by a great exodus of Puritans, who planted towns along the coast to the North of Plymouth, and obtained a charter of government and a great strip of land, and founded the colony of Massachusetts Bay.

Religious disputes drove Roger Williams and Anne Hutchinson out of Massachusetts and led to the founding of Rhode Island in 1636.

Other church rangles led to an emigration from Massachusetts to the Connecticut valley, where a little confederacy of towns was created and called Connecticut.

Some settlers from England went to Long Island Sound and there founded four towns which, in their turn, joined in a federal union called the New Haven Colony.

In time New Haven was joined to Connecticut, and Plymouth and Maine to Massachusetts; New Hampshire was made a royal colony; and the four New England colonies Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Connecticut—were definitely established. The territory of Massachusetts and Connecticut stretched across the continent to the "South Sea" or Pacific Ocean.

The Maryland colony was founded by Lord Baltimore, a Roman Catholic, who was influenced in his attempts of colonization by a desire to found a refuge for people of his own faith; and the first settlement was made in 1634 at St. Mary's. Annapolis was founded about 1683, and Baltimore in 1729.

Meantime Henry Hudson in the employ of the Dutch, discovered the Delaware and Hudson Rivers in 1609; and the Dutch, ignoring the claims of England, planted colonies on these rivers and called the country New Netherlands.

Then a Swedish company began to colonize the Delaware Bay and River coast of Virginia, which they called New Sweden.

Conflicts between the Dutch and the Swedes followed, and in 1655 New Sweden was made a part of New Netherlands.

The English seized New Netherlands in 1664, giving it to the Duke of York; and the Duke, after establishing the province of New York, gave New Jersey to two of his friends, and sold the three counties on the Delaware to William Penn. Meanwhile the king granted Penn what is now Pennsylvania in 1681.

The Carolinas were first chartered as one proprietary colony but were sold back to the king and finally separated in 1729.

Georgia, the last of the thirteen English colonies, was granted to Oglethorpe and others; as a refuge for poor debtors, in 1732.

In 1774 General Gage became governor of Massachusetts; and seeing that the people were gathering stores and cannon, he attempted to destroy the stores, and so brought on the battle of Lexington and Concord, which opened the war for Independence. The English army was surrounded at Yorktown by Washington and the French fleet and forced to surrender. A convention at Philadelphia framed the Constitution of the United States.

NATIONS THAT HAVE OWNED OUR SOIL.

Before the United States became a nation, six European powers owned, or claimed to own, various portions of the territory now contained within its boundary. England claimed the Atlantic coast from Maine to Florida. Spain once held Florida, Texas, California and all the territory south and west of Colorado. France in days gone by ruled the Mississippi valley. Holland once owned New Jersey, Delaware and the valley of the Hudson in New York and claimed as far eastward as the Connecticut River. The Swedes had settlements on the Delaware. Alaska was a Russian possession.

FORE-NAMES.

CHRISTIAN names are so called from having originally been given to converts at baptism as substitutes for their former pagan appellatives, many of which were borrowed from the names of their gods, and therefore rejected as profane. After the general introduction of Christianity, the epithet was still retained, because the imposition of names was ever connected with the earliest of its sacred rites. It is, nevertheless, most incorrect; since the majority of the personal names of modern times are borrowed from sources unconnected with Christianity. With what propriety can we call Hercules and Diana, Augustus and Julia, or even Henry and Caroline, Christian names? They should be called forenames (that is first names), a term much more preferable to the other. Perhaps the word name, without any adjunct, would be better still. We should then use the name and surname as distinctive words; whereas we now often regard them synonyms.

From the earliest times, names to distinguish one person from another have been in use. The names in the Old Testament are mostly original and generally given at the birth, in accordance with some circumstance connected with that event, or from some pious sentiment of the father or mother. The Jewish child received his name at the time of circumcision. This practice is still adopted amongst the Jews, and has been followed by the Christian Church giving a name at baptism.

The ancient Greeks used only one name, which was given on the ninth day after birth, and was chosen by the father, who also possessed the right of altering it. These names generally expressed some great quality—as bravery, wisdom, or skill. Thus Callienachus means excellent fighter; and Sophron means wise. In later times many names were derived from those of their gods—as Apollodorus, the Gift of Apollo. The eldest son usually bore the name of his paternal grandfather, to which was sometimes added the father's name, or the occupation, place of birth, or a nickname.

The Romans at a very early date used two names, and later on each Roman citizen had three. The prænomen was, like our Christian name, personal to the individual; as Caius and Marcus; in writing, the initials only were generally used. In early times it was given at puberty, but afterwards on the ninth day after birth. Women took no prænomen until marriage, when they adopted the feminine form of their husband's name. Every Roman citizen belonged to a gens and to a familia included in it. The nomen gentile (the second name) usually ended in ius, cius, or aius. The third name was the hereditary cognomen borne by the family, to which was sometimes a second cognomen called agnomen, was added. The cognomen was often derived from some event in the family history, or from some personal defect. In common intercourse the prænomen and cognomen only were used, as C. Cæsar, for C. Julius Cæsar. Many of the Roman names were of a much less dignified origin than the Greek, as Cicero (Vetchgrower), Crassus (Fat), Naso (Longnosed).

The Celtic and Teutonic names were originally very significant. Many were derived from "God," as Gottfried, Godwin, and others from genii or elves, as Alfred Elfrie (Elf King). Personal prowess, wisdom, and nobility of birth, were the origin of many names still in use, as Hilderbrand (the War Brand), Arnold (Valiant Eagle) Osborn (God bear). After the introduction of Christianity many of the old names were superseded by those taken from the Scriptures. These names in course of time became much altered; as for example, Owen, Evan, and Eoghan are different forms of Johann or John. A change of name was sometimes made at confirmation, and amongst Roman Catholics an additional name is given at the first communion. Sir Edward Coke tells us: "If a man be baptized by the name of Thomas, and after at his confirmation by the bishop he is named John, he may purchase by the name of his confirmation. And this was the case of Sir Francis Gawdye, late Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, whose name of baptism was Thomas, and his name of confirmation Francis; and that the name of Francis by the advice of all the judges in anno 36, Henry VIII, he did bear, and often used in all his purchases and grants." Another instance is that of Henry III of France, who, being the godson of Edward VI of England, was named Edward Alexander at his baptism in 1551; but at his confirmation in 1565 these names were changed to Henri.

In Germany the names are mostly of Teutonic origin, or connected with the early history of Christianity.

Double Christian names were not much in vogue before the nineteenth century. A very early instance is that of "John Thomas Jones," a runaway thief, mentioned in a collection of autograph letters from Cecil, Earl of Salisbury, and his son (1601); Charles George Cook, Judge of the Admiralty in 1665; and Henry Frederick Thynne, brother to Lord Weymouth, 1682, are other examples, which might easily be extended.

In France and Germany when surnames became universal, the prefix of De or von to a common plebeian name was considered as a mark of nobility. In Britain the De was not considered the test for nobility, for the names of some of the best families were not territorial; as Butler, Stewart and Spenser.

SCRIPTURAL NAMES ALREADY IN USE AT THE REFORMATION.

It now remains simply to consider the state of nomenclature in England at the eve of the Reformation in relation to the Bible. Four classes may be mentioned.

MYSTERY NAMES.

The leading incidents of Bible narrative were familiarized to the English lower orders by the performance of sacred plays, or mysteries, rendered under the supervision of the Church. To these plays is owed the early popularity of Adam and Eve, Noah, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, Sara, Daniel, Sampson, Susanna, Judith, Hanna or Anna, and Hester. But the Apocryphal names were not frequently used until about 1500. Scarcely any diminutives are found of them. On the other hand, Adam became Adeock and Adkin; Eve became Evott and Evett; Isaac became Hickin, Higgin, Higgott and Higgett; Joseph became Joskin; and Daniel became Dankin and Dannet.

CRUSADE NAMES.

The Crusaders gave several prominent names. To them we are indebted for Baptist, Ellis and Jordan; and John received a great stimulus. The sacred water, brought in the leathern bottle, was used for baptismal purposes. The Jordan commemorated John the Baptist, the second Elias, the forerunner and baptizer of Jesus Christ. Children were styled by these incidents. Jordan became popular throughout Western Europe. It gave to England, as already observed, Judd, Judkin, Judson, Jordan and Jordanson. Elias, as Ellis, took about the eighth place of frequency, and John for a while the first.

THE SAINT'S CALENDAR.

The legends of the saints were carefully taught by the priesthood, and the day was as religiously observed. All children born on these holy days received the name of the saint commemorated. St. James's Day, or St. Nicholas's Day, or St. Thomas's Day, saw a small batch of Jameses, Nicholases, and Thomases received into the fold of the church. In other cases the gossip had some favorite saint, and placed the child under his or her protection. Of course, it bore the patron's name. A large number of these hagiological names were extra-Biblical—such as Cecilia, Catherine, or Theobald. All the apostles, save Judas, became household names; John, Simon, Peter, Bartholomew, Matthew, James, Thomas and Philip being the favorites. Paul and Timothy were also utilized, the former being always found as Pol.

FESTIVAL NAMES.

If a child was born at Whitsuntide or Easter, Christmas or Epiphany, like Robinson Crusoe's man Friday, he received the name of the day. Hence our once familiar names of Neel or Nowell, Pask or Pascal, Easter, Pentecost, and Epiphany or Tiffany.

It will be observed that all these imply no direct or personal acquaintance with the Scriptures. All came through the Church. All, too, were in full tide of prosperity—with the single exception of Jordan, which was nearly obsolete—when the Bible, printed into English and set up in the churches, became an institution. The immediate result was that the old Scripture names of Bartholomew, Peter, Philip, and Nicholas received a blow much deadlier than that received by such Teutonic names as Robert, Richard, Roger and Ralph.

The subject of the influence of the Bible upon English nomenclature is not uninteresting. It may be said of the "Vulgar Tongue" Bible that it revolutionized the nomenclature within the space of forty years, or a little over a generation. No such crisis, surely, ever visited a nation's register before, nor can such possibly happen again. Every home felt the effect.

THE DECAY OF SINGLE PATRONYMICS IN BAPTISM.

The introduction of double baptismal names produced a revolution as immediate as it was unintentional. It put a stop to what bade fair to become a universal adoption of patronymics as single baptismal names. This practice took its rise about the year 1580. It became customary in highly placed families to christen the eldest son by the name of the landed estate to which he was heir. Especially was it common when the son succeeded to property through his mother; then the mother's surname was his Christian name. With the introduction of second baptismal names, this custom ceased; and the boy or girl, as the case might be, after a first orthodox name of Robert or Cecilia, received as a second the patronymic that before was given alone. Instead of Neville Clarke the name would be Charles Neville Clarke. From the year 1700 this has been a growing custom, and half the present list of treble names are thus formed.

Until about the commencement of the seventeenth century, no material change in the designations of Englishmen had occurred since the days of the earlier Edwards, when surnames were generally adopted. John de la Barre, it is true, had become plain John Barr, and Roger atte Hylle had softened to Roger Hill, but still the principle of a single Christian name and a single surname had been maintained throughout. About the period alluded to, the innovation of a second personal name occurs, though but very rarely. The practice was imported to Great Britain from the Continent, where it seems to have originated among the literati in imitation of the trianomina of antiquity. The accession of the many-named house of Brunswick may be said to have rendered it somewhat fashionable; and during the last century it has become every year more common. Should the fashion continue, it is probable that at the dawn of the twentieth century it will be as difficult to find a binomiated person in America, as it is in France at the present day.

Another innovation belongs to the seventeenth century; that of the use of some family name as a baptismal appellation, as Gouldsmith Hodgson, Boscawen Lower, Cloudsley Shovel. This practice as well as the other is highly to be commended, as serving to identify the individual with the designation. The genealogist will at once see its utility; and it is suggested to parents the desirability of inserting the maternal family name between the proper name of baptism and the surname, as James Morton Wilson, Henry Smith Bradley. Indeed it would be well to go further and add the maiden family name of the wife to the surname of the husband; thus if a Charles Harrison married a Mary Bradshawe, they should thereupon write themselves respectively Charles Bradshawe Harrison and Mary Bradshawe Harrison. If Vanity unites in the same escutcheon the arms of the wife with those of her lord, ought not Affection in like manner to blend their names? This usage is voluntarily followed at Geneva and in many provinces in France; and it serves to distinguish the bachelor from the married man.

In some districts, where a family name was originally applied at the font instead of the usual James, Peter, or John, that family name has come to be regarded as a regular christian name. For example: about Lewes, Trayton is fully as common as Samuel, Nicholas, Alfred, or any name occupying the second rank in point of frequency, and only less usual than Henry, William and John. In the sixteenth century a family of this name, from Cheshire, settled in Lewes, and continued to reside there for several successive generations, during the latter part of which period they became so popular that a host of children received the baptismal name of Trayton in compliment to them. The spirit of imitation succeeded; and there are at the present day scores of Traytons, who have neither any idea of the origin of their name, nor any doubt of its being as orthodox as the very common appellatives alluded to.

We have seen that the Christian name, once imposed, cannot be altered at the option of the bearer, as the surname may; at least not without the sanction of episcopal authority. Towards the close of the eighteenth century, Sir William Bridges exchanged the name of William for that of Brooke, by license from the Archbishop of Canterbury; but this is almost a solitary instance in modern times, as the occasion for it rarely arises. Before the Reformation, the unauthorized change of a Christian name was a grave offence. It is recorded in the consistorial acts of the Bishop of Rochester, that on Oct. 15, 1515, one Agnes Sharpe appeared and confessed that she had "of her own motion and consent, voluntarily changed, at confirmation, the name of her infant son to Edward, who when baptized was named Henry, for which she submitted to penance." The penance enjoined was to make a pilgrimage to the famous Rood of Grace, at the neighboring abbey of Boxley, and to carry in procession on five Lord's days, a lighted taper which she was to offer to the image of the Blessed Virgin.

THE PAUCITY OF NAMES.

There were no Scripture names in England when the Conqueror took possession; even in Normandy they had appeared but a generation or two before William came over. If any are found in the old English period, they were undoubtedly ecclesiastical titles, adopted at ordination. Greek and Latin saints were equally unnoticed.

Before many generations had passed, Bartholomew, Simon, Peter, Philip, Thomas, Nicholas, John and Elias, had engrossed a third of the male population; yet Domesday Book has no Philip, no Thomas, only one Nicholas; and but a springling of Johns. It was not long before Jack and Jill took the place of Godric and Godgifu as representative of the English sexes, yet Jack was from the bible and Jill from the saintly calendar.

Without entering into a deep discussion, it may be said that the great mass of the old English names had gone down before the year 1200 had been reached. Those that survived only held on for bare existence. From the moment of William's advent, the names of the Normans began to prevail. He brought in Bible names, Saint names, and his own Teutonic names. The old English names bowed to them, and disappeared.

A curious result quickly followed. From the year

1150 to 1550, four hundred years in round numbers, there was a very much smaller dictionary of English personal names than there had been for four hundred years before, and than there has been in the four hundred years since. The Norman list was really a small one, and yet it took possession of the whole of Great Britain.

A consequence of this was the Pet-name Epoch. In every community of one hundred Englishmen about the year 1300, there would be an average of twenty Johns and fifteen Williams; then would follow Thomas, Bartholomew, Nicholas, Philip, Simon, Peter and Isaac from the Scriptures; and Richard, Robert, Walter, Guy, Henry, Roger and Baldwin from the Teutonic list. Of female names, Matilda, Isabella and Emma were first favorites; and Cecilia, Catharine, Margaret and Gillian came closely upon their heels. Behind these, again, followed a fairly familiar number of names of either sex, some from the Teuton, some from the Hebrew, some from the Greek and Latin Church, but, when all told, not a large category.

This is not enough, for in common parlance it was not likely the full name would be used. Besides, there might be two, or even three Johns in the same family. So late as March, 1545, the will of John Parnell de Gyrton runs:

"Alice, my wife, and Old John, my son, to occupy my farm together, till Old John marries; Young John, my son, shall have Brenlay's land plowed and sowed at Old John's cost."

The register of Raby, Leicestershire, has this entry:

"1559. Item: 29th day of August was John, and John Picke, the children of Xtopher and Anne, baptized.

"Item: the 31st of August the same John and John were buried."

Mr. Burns, who quotes these instances in his "History of Parish Registers," adds that at this same time "one John Barker had three sons named John Barker, and two daughters named Margaret Barker."

If the same family had but one name for the household we may imagine the difficulty when this one name was also popular throughout the village. The difficulty was naturally solved by, firstly, the adoption of nick forms; secondly, the addition of pet desinences. Thus Emma became by the one practice simple Emm, by the other Emmott; and any number of boys in a small community might be entered in a register as Bartholomew, and yet preserve their individuality in work-a-day life by bearing such names as Bat, Bate, Batty, Bartle, Bartelot, Batcock, Batkin, and Tolly, or Tholly. In a word, these several forms of Bartholomew were treated as so many separate proper names.

It was, of course, impossible for Englishmen and English women to maintain their individuality on these terms. Various methods to secure a personality arose. The surname was adopted, and there were John Atte-wood, John the Wheelwright, John the Bigg, and John Richard's son, in every community. Among the middle and lower classes these did not become hereditary until so late as 1450 or 1500.

This is easily proved. In the wardrobe accounts for Edward IV, 1480, occur the following items:

"John Poyntmaker, for pointing of XI dozen points of silk pointed with agelettes laton.

"Jehn Carter, for carriage away of a grete loode of robeux that was left in the strete.

"To a laborer called Rychard Gardyner for working in the gardyne.

"To Alice Shapster for making and washing xxiii; sherts, and xxiii stomachers." Shapster is a feminine form of Shapper or Shaper—one who shaped or cut out cloths for garments.

All these several individuals, having no particular surname, took or received one from the occupation they temporarily followed.

GENEALOGY.

None of the sciences is less generally studied than that of Genealogy. Like all the others, though dry and repellant at first, when perseveringly followed out it becomes, in the research, full of interest, and productive of great results.

An account of the origin, descent and relations of families is often a principal auxiliary to the true appreciation of history. In treating of persons who have distinguished themselves in their country's annals, not only are all those actions of their lives which have a bearing upon the character of the age in which they lived, or the well-being of the nation and community to which they belonged, to be considered, but their own family and personal extraction, standing and descent.

The genealogist confines himself to tracing family lineages, or the course of succession in particular families. That is his peculiar department. He leaves to the annalist the chronicling of events in the order of their occurrence, and to the historian the filling up of the details and circumstances to which these dry facts refer, and the description of the causes from which they spring, as well as the consequences to which they lead. The sole purpose and pursuit of the historian is to be able to show "Who is Who" and to distinguish those who are somebody from those who are nobody.

The principal nomenclature of genealogy is as follows:

All persons descended from a common ancestor constitute a family.

A series of persons so descended is called a line.

A line is either direct or collateral.

The direct line is divided into the ascending and descending.

The progenitors are father, grandfather, etc.; the other ascendants not in a direct line are called ancestors.

The descendants are son, grandson, etc.; the other descendants not in a direct line are generally termed Posterity.

The Collateral comprehended all those which unite in a common progenitor.

Some affect to hold in contempt the study of succession of families. Others undervalue it, without being fully aware of the importance of genealogical research.

There are some people, says Dr. Lindsay Alexander, in his "Life of Dr. Wardlaw," who say they attach no importance to a man's descent, or to family honors, and despise those who do. Perhaps they may be sincere, but their judgment in this matter is certainly erroneous, and their feeling unnatural. "The glory of children," says the wisest of men, "are their fathers;" and a honorable descent should be highly valued.

HERALDRY.

Heraldic devices, truly so called, made their first appearance in Europe in the middle of the twelfth century; and about one hundred years later Heraldry became a science in high repute, without being able to trace its intermediate progress, or discover the names of those who first laid down its laws, or subsequently promulgated them. The earliest Heraldic document of which even a copy has come down to us is a roll of arms, that is to say, a catalogue of the armorial bearings of the king of England, and the principal barons, knights, etc., in the reign of Henry III; and, from internal evidence, supposed to have been originally compiled between the years 1240-1245. This transcript was made by Glover, Somerset Herald, in 1586, and is preserved in the College of Arms. Other rolls are to be found both there and in the British Museum, of nearly the same date, but none earlier; and no work explanatory of the science has been yet discovered of a period anterior to the reign of Edward III. In the reign of Henry III, armorial ensigns had become hereditary, marks of cadency distinguished the various members of a family, and the majority of the present Heraldic terms were already in existence.

THE USE OF ARMS

At that period was to distinguish persons and property, and record descent and alliance, and no modern invention has yet been found to supersede it. For this reason alone, as we have remarked elsewhere, of all ancient usages it is one of the least likely to become obsolete. Hundreds of persons may be entitled to the same initials, may possess precisely the same name; but only the members of a particular family can lawfully bear certain armorial ensigns, and the various branches of that family have their separate differences to distinguish one from the other. After the lapse of centuries, the date of a building or the name of its founder or ancient possessor, may be ascertained at the present day, through the accidental preservation of a sculptured coat of arms or heraldic encaustic tile; and the careful study of early rolls of arms enables the historian to discover matrimonial alliances and family connections, of which no written record has been found; and thereby not only to complete the very imperfect genealogies of many of the bravest and wisest of English nobility and gentry, but also to account for sundry acts, both public and private, the motives for which have been misunderstood, or altogether unknown to the biographer or the historian.

HERALDRY.

VARIOUS SORTS OF ARMS.

Arms are not only granted to individuals and families, but also to cities, corporate bodies, and learned societies.

Arms of Dominion or Sovereignty are properly the arms of the kings or sovereigns of the territories they govern, which are also regarded as the arms of the State. Thus the Lions of England and the Russian Eagle are the arms of the Kings of England and the Emperors of Russia, and cannot be properly altered by a change of dynasty.

Arms of Pretension are those of kingdoms, provinces, or territories to which a prince or lord has some claim, and which he adds to his own, though the kingdoms or territories are governed by a foreign king or lord; thus the Kings of England for many ages quartered the arms of France in their escutcheon as the descendants of Edward III, who claimed that kingdom, in right of his mother, a French princess.

Arms of Concession are arms granted by sovereigns as the reward of virtue, valor or extraordinary service. All arms granted to subjects were originally conceded by the Sovereign.

Arms of Community are those of bishoprics, cities, universities, academies, societies and corporate bodies.

Arms of patronage are such as governors of provinces, lords of manors, etc., add to their family arms as a token of their superiority, right jurisdiction.

Arms of Family, or paternal arms, are such as are hereditary and belong to one particular family, which none others have a right to assume, nor can they do so without rendering themselves guilty of a breach of the laws of honor, punishable by the Earl Marshal and the Kings-at-Arms. The assumption of arms has, however, become so common that little notice is taken of it at the present time.

Arms of Alliance are those gained by marriage.

Arms of Succession are such as are taken up by those who inherit certain estates by bequest, entail, or donation.

THE SHIELD.

The shield contains the field or ground whereon are represented the charges or figures that form a coat of arms.

PATRIOTIC SOCIETIES IN THE UNITED STATES.

Within the past few years there has been a remarkable movement in the United States, which has resulted in the formation of many patriotic hereditary societies of large membership, with chapters in every State in the Union. Those only are eligible to membership who can prove their descent from an ancestor of Colonial or Revolutionary times, from an officer or soldier or seaman of the various wars, from a pilgrim in the Mayflower, an early Huguenot emigrant, etc. These societies bring men and women of like traditions together, and organize them in an effective way for action. The action contemplated is patriotic—never religious or related to party politics. The general society from its headquarters issues charters to branch societies in the different States. Each State society forms an organized group of persons well known to each other, by name at least, and often personally.

Certain of these societies have been very active in preserving old monuments, buildings, landmarks and historic documents, or in erecting tablets and monuments at historic places, or in marking the sites of battles or the graves of Revolutionary soldiers. Others have founded prizes to be given annually to school children for essays on events in American history. Others, again, formally celebrate the nation's anniversaries. All of them foster patriotism and historical research, and teach organization—the sinking of individual desire in a common loyalty. There are probably too many such organizations at present, and more are forming. The weaker societies will, however, die; and those that remain will represent some real aspiration of their members.

As the entrance to such societies is through descent from some ancestor, genealogy has been powerfully stimulated, and thousands of family records have been examined and summarized in print. Our Colonial and Revolutionary history has been studied in its details, which is the only way to fully realize it. The men of to-day have been connected with Colonial and Revolutionary times. The children of the coming century will find their ancestral records all prepared for them, and they will be face to face with high standards of duty and effort.

THE SOCIETY OF COLONIAL WARS,

Instituted in 1892, is open to lineal male descendants of civil or military officers, or of soldiers, who served the colonies between May 13, 1607 (Jamestown) and April 19, 1775 (Lexington).

THE SOCIETY OF AMERICAN WARS,

Founded in 1897, includes the lineal male descendants of soldiers or civil officers from 1607 to 1783, and of officers of the War of 1812, of the War with Mexico, and of the Civil War.

THE ORDER OF THE FOUNDERS AND PATRIOTS OF AMERICA,

Founded in 1896, is open to any male citizen of the United States who is lineally descended in the male line of either parent from an ancestor who settled in any of the colonies between 1607 and 1657, and whose intermediate ancestors adhered as patriots to the cause of the colonists throughout the War of the Revolution.

THE SOCIETY OF THE CINCINNATI,

Instituted in 1783 is composed of descendants of officers of the Revolutionary army, usually the eldest male direct descendant.

THE AZTEC CLUB,

Founded in 1847, is open to the descendants of officers of the army who served in Mexico, usually the eldest male direct descendant.

THE MILITARY ORDER OF THE LOYAL LEGION OF THE UNITED STATES,

Founded in 1865, is composed of officers who served in the War of the Rebellion, and of their eldest direct male lineal descendants.

THE SOCIETY OF THE WAR OF 1812, ORGANIZED IN 1814,

Is composed of lineal male descendants of soldiers or sailors of the War of 1812.

THE NAVAL ORDER OF THE UNITED STATES,

Instituted in 1890, is open to officers of the navy who have served in war, and to their male descendants, etc.; and also to enlisted men who have received a Medal of Honor from the United States for bravery.

THE SONS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION,

Instituted in 1875, must prove their descent from a Revolutionary ancestor. The Sons of the Revolution (1876) is organized on the same basis. It is expected that these two large societies will be consolidated.

THE HOLLAND SOCIETY,

Incorporated in 1775, is composed of the direct male descendants of Hoilanders resident in America before 1675.

THE HUGUENOT SOCIETY OF AMERICA,

Organized in 1883, admits descendants of Huguenots who came to America before 1787.

THE SOCIETY OF COLONIAL DAMES OF AMERICA,

Organized in 1891, is composed of women descended from an ancestor who held an office of importance in the colonies previous to 1750.

There are various other societies for women, of which the most important are Daughters of the American Revolution, founded in 1890; and Daughters of the Revolution, founded in 1891; and there is also a society of Children of the American Revolution, founded in 1895.

THE SOCIETY OF "MAYFLOWER" DESCENDANTS,

Organized in 1894, includes male and female descendants of the passengers of the Mayflower (1620).

MEDAL OF HONOR LEGION.

The one decoration that is given by the government of the United States is the Medal of Honor, which was authorized by acts of Congress of 1862 and 1863 to be awarded to officers and enlisted men of the army for "gallantry in action and soldier-like qualities during the present insurrection." It has been bestowed only for conspicuous services. For example the Twenty-seventh Regiment of Maine Infantry was present on the field where the battle of Gettysburg was fought, and its term of service had expired. The entire regiment, to a man, volunteered to remain on the field and fight the battle; and for this gallant conduct a medal was awarded to each officer and man. A Naval Medal of Honor is also awarded by the government and it is highly prized.

FORE-NAMES OF MEN. AND THEIR SIGNIFICANCE.

Aaron : Lofty ; inspired.	Andronicus : A conqueror of men.
Abdiel : The servant of God.	Anselm, or Ansel : Protection of man.
Abel : Breath, vanity.	Anthony or Antony : Priceless ; praiseworthy.
Abiathar : Father of plenty.	Apollon : Of Apollo.
Abiel. Father of strength.	Archelaus : Ruler of the people.
Abiezer : Father of help.	Archibald : Extremely bold ; or, holy prince.
Abijah : To whom Jehovah is a father.	Ariel : Lion of God ; valiant for God.
Abner : Father of light.	Aristarchus : A good prince.
Abraham : Father of a multitude.	Arnold : Strong as an eagle.
Abram : Father of elevation.	Artemas : Gift of Artemis, or Minerva.
Absalom : Father of peace.	Arthur : High, noble.
Adam : Man ; earth-man ; red earth.	Asa : Healer ; physician.
Adiel : The ornament of God.	Asahel : Made of God.
Adin, or Adino : Tender ; delicate ; soft.	Asaph : A collector.
Adolph or Adolphus : Noble wolf ; i.e. , noble hero.	Asarelah : Upright to God.
Adoniram : Lord of height.	Ashbel : Fire of Bel.
Alaric : All-rich ; or, noble ruler.	Asher : Happy, fortunate.
Albert : Nobly bright, illustrious.	Ashur : Black, blackness.
Alexander : A defender of men.	Athanasius : Immortal.
Alfred : Elf in council ; good counsellor.	Athelstan : Noble stone.
Algernon : With whiskers.	Aubrey : Ruler of spirits.
Allan : Corruption of Ælienus .	Augustin, Augustine, or Austin : Belonging to Augustus.
Almon : Hidden.	Augustus : Exalted, imperial.
Alonzo : Same as Alphonso.	Aurelius : Golden.
Alpheus : Exchange.	Azariah : Helped of the Lord.
Alphonso : All-ready ; willing.
Alvah, or Alvan : Iniquity.	Baldwin : Bold, courageous friend.
Alvin or Alwin : Beloved by all.	Baptist : A baptizer ; purifier.
Amariah : Whom Jehovah promised.	Barachias : Whom Jehovah has blessed.
Amasa : A burden.	Bardolph : A distinguished helper.
Ambrose : Immortal ; divine.	Barnabas or Barnaby : Son of consolation.
Ammi : My people.
Amos : Strong ; courageous.
Andrew : Strong, manly.

- Bartholomew: A warlike son
 Barzillai: Iron of the Lord; firm; true.
 Basil: Kingly; royal.
 Benedict: Blessed.
 Benjamin: Son of the right hand.
 Benoni: Son of grief or trouble.
 Beriah: In calamity.
 Bernard: Bold as a bear.
 Bertram: Bright raven.
 Bethuel: Man of God.
 Bezaleel: In the shadow of God.
 Boniface: A benefactor.
 Brian: Strong.
 Bruno: Brown.
 Cadwallader: Battle arranger.
 Caesar: Hairy; or blue-eyed.
 Cain: Gotten, or acquired.
 Caleb: A dog.
 Calvin: Bald.
 Cecil: Dim-sighted.
 Cephas: A stone.
 Charles: Strong; manly; noble-spirited.
 Christian: A believer in Christ.
 Christopher: Bearing Christ.
 Clarence: Illustrious.
 Claudius, or Claude: Lame.
 Clement: Mild-tempered, merciful.
 Conrad: Bold in council; resolute.
 Constant: Firm, faithful.
 Constantine: Resolute, firm.
 Cornelius: Horn.
 Crispin, Crispus, or Crispian: Having curly hair.
 Cuthbert: Noted splendor.
 Cyprian: Of Cyprus.
 Cyril: Lordly.
 Cyrus: The sun.
 Dan: A judge.
 Daniel: A divine judge.
 Darius: Perserver.
 David: Beloved.
 Demetrius: Belonging to Ceres.
 Denis, or Dens: Same Dionysius.
 Dexter: The right hand.
 Dionysius: Belonging to Dionysos, or Bacchus the god of wine.
 Donald: Proud chief.
 Duncan: Brown chief.
 Eben: A stone.
 Ebenezer: The stone of help.
 Edgar: A javelin (or protector) of property.
 Edmund: Defender of property.
 Edward: Guardian of property.
 Edwin: Gainer of property.
 Egbert: The sword's brightness; famous with the sword.
 Elbert: Same as Albert.
 Eldred: Terrible.
 Eleazer: To whom God is a help.
 Eli: A foster son.
 Eliab: God is his father.
 Eliakim: Whom God sets up.
 Elias: The same as Elijah.
 Elihu: God the Lord.
 Elijah: Jehovah is my God.
 Elphalet: God of salvation.
 Elisha: God my salvation.
 Elizur: God is my rock.
 Ellis: A variation of Elisha.
 Elmer: Noble, excellent.
 Elnathan: God gave.
 Emmanuel: God with us.
 Emery, Emmery or Emory: Powerful, rich.
 Eneas: Praised, commended.
 Enoch: Consecrated, dedicated.
 Enos: Man.
 Ephraim: Very fruitful.
 Erasmus: Lovely; worthy to be loved.
 Erastus: Lovely, amiable.

- Eric: Rich, brave, powerful.
Ernest, Ernestus: Earnest.
Esau: Covered with hair.
Ethan: Firmness, strength.
Eugene: Well-born; noble.
Eusebius: Pious, godly.
Eustace: Healthy, strong; standing firm.
Evan: Same as John.
Everard: Strong as a wild boar.
Ezekiel: Strength of God.
Ezra: Help.

Felix: Happy; prosperous.
Ferdinand or Fernando: Brave, valiant.
Festus: Joyful, glad.
Francis: Free.
Frank, Franklin: Contraction of Francis.
Frederic or Frederick: Abounding in peace, peaceful ruler.

Gabriel: Man of God.
Gad: A troop, or company.
Gaius: Rejoiced.
Gamaliel: Recompense of God.
Geoffrey: Same as Godfrey.
George: A landholder, husbandman.
Gerald: Strong with the spear.
Gershon: An exile.
Gideon: A destroyer.
Gilbert: Yellow-bright; famous.
Giles: A kid.
Given: Gift of God.
Goddard: Pious, virtuous.
Godfrey: At peace with God.
Godwin: Good in war.
Gregory: Watchful.
Griffith: Having great faith.
Gustavus: A warrior, hero.
Guy: A leader.

Hannibal: Grace of Baal.
Harold: A champion; general of an army.
Heman: Faithful.
Henry: The head or chief of a house.
Herbert: Glory of the army.
Hercules: Lordly fame.
Herman: A warrior.
Hezekiah: Strength of the Lord.
Hilary: Cheerful, merry.
Hillel: Praise.
Hiram: Most noble.
Homer: A pledge, security.
Horace, Horatio: Oak wood; or worthy to be loved.
Hosea: Salvation.
Howell: Sound, whole.
Hubert: Bright in spirit; soul-bright.
Hugh, or Hugo: Mind, spirit, soul.
Humphrey: Protector of the home.

Ichabod: The glory is departed.
Ignatius: Ardent, fiery.
Immanuel: Same as Emmanuel.
Increase: Increase of faith.
Ingram: Raven.
Inigo: Same as Ignatius (Spanish form).
Ira: Watchful.
Isaac: Laughter.
Isaiah: Salvation of the Lord.
Israel: A soldier of God.
Ishmael: Afflicted her.
Ithiel: God is with me.
Ivan: Same as John (Russian form).

Jabez: He will cause pain.
Jacob: A supplanter.
Jairus: He will enlighten.
James: Same as Jacob.

- Japheth: Enlargement.
 Jared: Descent.
 Jason: A healer.
 Jasper: Treasure master.
 Javan: Clay, supple.
 Jedediah: Beloved of the Lord.
 Jeffrey: Same as Godfrey.
 Jeremiah, Jeremias, or Jerome: Exalted of the Lord.
 Jerome: Holy name.
 Jesse: Wealth.
 Jesus: Same as Joshua.
 Joab: Jehovah is his father.
 Job: Afflicted, persecuted.
 Joel: The Lord is God.
 John: The gracious gift of God.
 Jonah, or Jonas: A dove.
 Jonathan: Gift of Jehovah.
 Joseph: He shall add.
 Joshua: The Lord is welfare.
 Josiah or Josias: Given of the Lord.
 Jotham: The Lord is upright.
 Judah: Praised.
 Julian: Sprung from, or belonging to Julius.
 Julius: Soft-haired.
 Justin, or Justus: Just.
- Kenelm: A defender of his kindred.
Kenneth: A leader, commander.
 Laban: White.
 Lambert: Illustrious with landed possessions.
 Lancelot: A little angel; otherwise a little lance or warrior; or a servant.
 Laurence or Lawrence: Crowned with laurel.
 Lazarus: God will help.
 Leander: Lion man.
 Lebbeus: Praise.
- Lemuel: Created by God.
 Leonard: Strong, or brave as a lion.
 Leonidas: Lion-like.
 Leopold: Bold for the people.
 Levi: Adhesion.
 Lewis: Bold warrior.
 Linaus: Flaxen-haired.
 Lionel: Young lion.
 Lewellyn: Lightning.
 Loamm: Not my people.
 Lodowic: Same as Ludovic or Lewis.
 Lorenzo: same as Laurence (Spanish and Italian form).
 Lot: A veil, covering.
 Louis: Same as Lewis.
 Lubin: Beloved friend.
 Lucian: Belonging to or sprung from Lucius.
 Lucius: Born at break of day.
 Ludovic: Same as Lewis.
 Luke: Light-giving.
 Luther: Illustrious warrior.
 Lycurgus: Wolf-driver.
- Madoc: Good, beneficent.
 Malachi: Messenger of the Lord.
 Manasseh: Forgetfulness.
 Marcellus: Diminutive of Marcus.
 Marcius: Same as Marcus.
 Marcus or Mark: A hammer, otherwise, a male, or sprung from Mars.
 Marmauke: A mighty noble.
 Martin: Of Mars; warlike.
 Matthew: Gift of Jehovah.
 Matthias: Gift of the Lord.
 Maurice: Corruption of Amabuc, (himmlereich); the kingdom of heaven.
 Maximilian: The greatest Aemilianus.

- Meredith: Sea-protector.
 Micah: Who is like the Lord?
 Michael: Who is like to God?
 Miles: A soldier.
 Morgan: A seaman, a dweller on the sea.
 Moses: Drawn out of the water.
 Naaman: Pleasantness.
 Nahum: Consolation.
 Napoleon: Lion of the forest-dell.
 Nathan: Given, a gift.
 Nathanael, or Nathaniel: The gift of God.
 Neal or Neil: Dark, swarthy; otherwise (Celtic) chief.
 Nehemiah: Comfort of the Lord.
 Nicholas or Nicolas: Victory of the people.
 Noah: Rest, comfort.
 Noel: (Dies Natalis) Christmas; Born on Christmas Day.
 Norman: A Northman, native of Normandy.
 Obadiah: Servant of the Lord.
 Obed: Serving God.
 Octavius or Octavus: The eighth-born.
 Oliver: An olive tree.
 Orestes: A mountaineer.
 Orlando: Same as Rowland.
 Oscar: Bounding warrior.
 Osmund or Osmund: Protection of God.
 Oswald or Oswold: Power of God.
 Owen: Lamb, otherwise, young warrior.
 Ozias: Strength of the Lord.
 Patrick: Noble; a patrician.
 Paul, Paulinus, or Paulus: Little.
 Peleg: Division.
 Peregrine: A stranger.
 Peter: A rock.
 Philander: A lover of men.
 Philemon: Loving, friendly.
 Philip: A lover of horses.
 Phineas, or Phinehas: Mount of brass.
 Pius: Pious, dutiful.
 Polycarp: Much fruit.
 Ptolemy: Mighty in war.
 Quintin: The fifth.
 Ralph: Same as Rodolphus.
 Randal: House-wolf.
 Raphael: The healing of God.
 Raymond, or Raymund: Wise protection.
 Reginald: Strong ruler.
 Reuben: Behold, a son.
 Reuel: Friend of God.
 Reynold: Same as Reginald.
 Richard: Rich-hearted, powerful.
 Robert: bright in fame.
 Roderic or Roderick: Rich in fame.
 Rodolph or Rodolphus: Famous wolf or hero.
 Roger: Famous with the spear.
 Roland or Rowland: Fame of the land.
 Rudolph or Rudolphus: Variations of Rodolphus.
 Rufus: Red, red-haired.
 Rupert: Same as Robert.
 Salmon: Shady.
 Samson, or Sampson: Splendid sun, great joy and felicity.
 Samuel: Heard of God; asked for of God.
 Saul: Asked for.
 Seba: Eminent.
 Sebastian: Venerable, reverend.
 Septimus: The seventh born.

- Sereno or Serenus: Calm, peaceful.
 Seth: Appointed.
 Shadrach: Rejoicing in the way.
 Sigismund: Conquering, protection.
 Silas: A contraction of Silvanus.
 Silvanus: Living in a wood.
 Silvester: Bred in the country rustic.
 Simeon, Simon: Hearing with acceptance.
 Solomon: Peaceable.
 Stephen: A crown.
 Swithin: Strong friend.
 Sylvanus: Same as Silvanus.
 Sylvester: Same as Silvester.
 Tertius: the third born.
 Thaddeus: The wise.
 Theobald: Bold for the people.
 Theodore: The gift of God.
 Theodoric: Powerful among the people.
 Theophilus: A lover of God.
 Theron: A hunter.
 Thomas: A twin.
 Timothy: Fearing God.
 Titus: Honorable.
 Tobiah or Tobias: Distinguished of the Lord.
 Tristram: Grave, pensive, melancholy, sorrowful, sad.
 Tybalt: Same as Theobald.
 Ulysses: A hater.
 Urban: Of the town; courteous; polished.
 Uriah: Light of the Lord.
 Urian: A husbandman.
 Uriel: Light of God.
 Valentine: Strong, healthy, powerful.
 Vicesimus: The twentieth born.
 Victor: A conqueror.
 Vincent: Conquering.
 Vivian: Lively.
 Walter: Ruling the roast.
 William: Resolute helmet, or helmet of resolution; defence; protector.
 Winfred: Win-peace.
 Zabdiel: Gift of God.
 Zaccheus: Innocent, pure.
 Zachariah, or Zachery: Remembered of the Lord.
 Zadok: Just.
 Zebediah or Zebedee: Gift of the Lord.
 Zebina: Bought.
 Zebulon: Dwelling.
 Zedekiah: Justice of the Lord.
 Zelotes: A zealot.
 Zenas: Gift of Jupiter.
 Zephaniah: Hid of the Lord.

FORE-NAMES OF WOMEN.

AND THEIR SIGNIFICANCE.

Abigail: My father's joy.	Belinda: From Bella, Isabella, Elizabeth.
Achsa: Anklet.	Benedicta; Feminine of Benedictus.
Ada: The same as Edith.	Bertha: Bright; beautiful.
Adela, Adelaide, or Adeline: Of noble birth, a princess.	Betsey: A corruption of Elizabeth.
Agatha: Good, kind.	Blanch, or Blanche: White.
Agnes: Chaste, pure.	Bona: Good.
Alberta: Feminine of Albert.	Bridget: Strength.
Alethea: Truth.
Alexandra, or Alexandrina: Feminine of Alexander.	Camilla: Attendant at a sacrifice.
Alice, or Alicia: Same as Adeline.	Caroline: Feminine of Carolus or Charles.
Almira: Lofty; a princess.	Cassandra: One who inflames with love.
Althea: A healer.	Catharina, Catharine, or Catherine: Pure.
Amabel: Loveable.	Cecilia or Cecily: Feminine of Cecil.
Amanda: Worthy to be loved.	Celestine: Heavenly.
Amelia: Busy, energetic.	Celia: Feminine of Coelus.
Amy: Beloved.	Charlotte: Feminine of Charles.
Angelica, Angelina: Lovely, angelic.	Chloe: A green herb; blooming.
Ann, Anna, or Anne: Grace.	Christiana, or Christina: Feminine of Christianus.
Annabella: Feminine of Hannibal.	Cicely: A variation of Celia.
Annette: Variation of Anne.	Clara: Bright, illustrious.
Antoinette: Diminutive of Antonia.	Clarice, or Clarissa: A variation of Clara.
Antonia, or Antonina: Inestimable.	Claudia: Feminine of Claudius.
Arabella: A fair altar; otherwise, corruption of Orabilia, a praying woman.	Clementina, or Clementine: Mild, gentle.
Ariana: A corruption of Ariadne.	Constance: Firm, constant.
Augusta: Feminine of Augustus.	Cora: Maiden; a form of Corinna.
Aurelia: Feminine of Aurelius.	Cornelia: Feminine of Cornelius.
Aurora: Morning redness; fresh; brilliant.	Cynthia: Belonging to Mount Cynthus.
Azubah; Deserted.
Barbara: Foreign; strange.
Beatrice, or Beatrix: Making happy.

- Deborah: A bee.
 Delia: of Delos.
 Diana: Goddess.
 Diantha: Flower of Jove; a pink.
 Dinah: Judged.
 Dora: A variation of Dorothea.
 Dorcas: A gazelle.
 Dorinda: Same as Dorothea.
 Dorothea, or Dorothy: Gift of God.
 Drusilla: Dew watered.
 Edith: Happiness; otherwise rich gift.
 Edna: Pleasure.
 Eleanor, or Elnor: Light; same as Helen.
 Elisabeth, Elizabeth, or Eliza: Worshiper of God; consecrated to God.
 Ella: A contraction of Eleanor.
 Ellen: A diminutive of Eleanor.
 Elvira: White.
 Emeline, or Emmeline: Energetic, industrious.
 Emily, or Emma: Same as Emeline.
 Ernestine: feminine and diminutive.
 Esther: A star; good fortune.
 Ethelind, or Ethelinda: Noble snake.
 Eudora: Good gift.
 Eugenia, or Eugenie: Feminine of Eugene.
 Eulalia: Fair speed.
 Eunice: Happy victory.
 Euphemia: Of good report.
 Eva: Same as Eve.
 Evangeline: Bringing glad news.
 Eve: Life.
 Evelina, or Eveline: Diminutive of Eva.
 Fauny: Diminutive of Frances.
 Faustina: Fortunate; lucky.
 Felicia: Happiness.
 Fidelia: Faithful.
 Flora: Flowers; goddess of flowers and spring.
 Florence: Blooming; flourishing.
 Frances: Feminine of Francis.
 Frederica: Feminine of Frederick.
 Georgiana, or Georgina: Feminine of George.
 Geraldine: Feminine of Gerald.
 Gertrude: Spear-maiden.
 Grace or Gratia: Grace, favor.
 Griselda: Stone; heroine.
 Hannah: Same as Anna.
 Harriet, or Harriot: Feminine of Henry.
 Helen, or Helena: Light.
 Henrietta: Feminine diminutive of Henry.
 Hephzibah: My delight is in her.
 Heiter, or Hestha: Same as Esther.
 Hilaria: Feminine of Hilary.
 Honora, or Honorfa: Honorable.
 Hortensia: A lady gardener.
 Huldah: A weasel.
 Ida: Happy.
 Inez: Same as Agnes.
 Irene: Peaceful.
 Isabel, or Isabella: Same as Elizabeth.
 Jane, or Janet: Feminine of John.
 Jaqueline, Feminine of James.
 Jean, Jeanne, or Jeannette: Same as Jane or Joan.
 Jemima: A dove.
 Jerusha: Possessed, married.
 Joan, Joanna, Johanna: Feminine of John.

- Joseph, or Josephine: Feminine of Joseph.
- Joyce: Sportive.
- Judith: Praised.
- Julia: Feminine of Julius.
- Juliana: Feminine of Julian.
- Juliet: Diminutive of Julia.
- Justina: Feminine of Justin.
- Katharine, or Katherine: Same as Catharine.
- Keturah: Incense.
- Keziah: Cassia.
- Laura: A laurel.
- Laurinda: A variation of Laura.
- Lavinia: Of Latium.
- Leonora: Same as Eleanor.
- Letitia: Happiness.
- Leitice: A variation of Letitia.
- Lillian, or Lily: A lily.
- Lois: Good; desirable.
- Lorinda: A variation of Laurinda.
- Louisa, or Louise: Feminine of Louis.
- Lucia: Same as Lucy.
- Lucinda: Same as Lucy.
- Lucrece, or Lucretia: Gain; otherwise, light.
- Lucy: Feminine of Lucius.
- Lydia: A native of Lydia.
- Mabel: A contraction of Amabel.
- Madeline: French form of Magdeline.
- Magdalene: A native of Magdala.
- Marcella: Feminine of Marcellus.
- Marcia: Feminine of Marcus.
- Margaret: A pearl.
- Maria: Same as Mary.
- Marianne: A compound of Mary and Anne.
- Marion: A French form of Mary.
- Martha: The ruler of the house; otherwise, sorrowful, melancholy.
- Mary: Bitter; otherwise, their rebellion; or, star of the east.
- Mathilda, or Matilda: Mighty battle-maid; heroine.
- Maud: A contraction of Matilda; or Madalene.
- May: Month of May; or Mary.
- Mehetabel, Mehitabel: Benefited of God.
- Melicent: Sweet-singer; otherwise working strength.
- Melissa: A bee.
- Mildred: Mild threatener.
- Miranda: Admirable.
- Miriam: Same as Mary.
- Myra: She who weeps or laments.
- Nancy: A familiar form of Anne.
- Nora: A contraction of Helenora; Honora; and of Leonora.
- Octavia: Feminine of Octavius.
- Olive, or Olivia: An olive.
- Ophelia: A serpent.
- Olympia: Heavenly.
- Paula, Paulina, or Pauline: Feminine of Paulus or Paul.
- Penelope: A weaver.
- Persis: A Persian woman.
- Phebe, or Phoebe: Pure, radiant.
- Philippa: Feminine of Philip.
- Phyllis, Phyllis: A green bough.
- Polly: A diminutive of Mary.
- Priscilla: Advanced in years.
- Prudence: In Latin Prudentia.
- Rachel: An ewe.
- Rebecca, or Rebekah: of enchanting beauty.
- Rhoda: A rose.
- Rosa: A rose.

Rosabel, or Rosabella: A fair rose.	Tabitha: A gazelle.
Rosalia, or Rosalie: Little and blooming rose.	Theodora: Feminine of Theodore.
Rosalind: Beautiful as a rose.	Theodosia: The gift of God.
Rosamond: Horse protection; or famous protection.	Theresa: Carrying ears of corn.
Roxana: Dawn of day.	Thomasa, or Thomasine: Feminine of Thomas.
Ruth: Beauty.	Tryphena: Delicate; luxurious.
	Tryphosa: Luxurious, dainty.
Sabina: A Sabine woman.	Ullica: Rich.
Sabrina: The river Severn.	Urania: Heavenly.
Salome: Peaceful.	Ursula: She-bear.
Salva: Safe.
Sara, or Sarah, A princess.	Valeria: Feminine of Valerius.
Selina: Parsley; otherwise moon.	Victoria: Victory, or feminine of Victor.
Serina: Feminine of Serenus, or Sereno.	Viola: A violet.
Sibyl, or Sibylla: A prophetess.	Virginia: Virgin; pure.
Sophia: Wisdom.	Vivian: Lively; cheerful.
Sophronia: Of a sound mind.	Wilhelmina: Feminine of Wilhelm, German form of William.
Stella: A star.	Winifred: A lover of peace.
Stephana: Feminine of Stephen.	Zenobia: Having life from Jupiter.
Susan, Susanna, or Susannah: A lily.

CRESCENT

Family Records

Family Records

OF

Seven Generations
Given.

Paternal - Maternal SIDES.

A.PATERNAL HEAD [AND MATERNAL] OF THE HOUSEHOLD.My full name is:Place of my birth:Date of my birth:School attended:Residence:Occupation:Positions held, traits of character, etc.:55 Information of my forefathers given on pages B, D, F.*Place of my marriage:Date of my marriage:Full maiden name of my wife:Place of her birth:Date of her birth:School attended:Her attainments, traits of character, etc.:56 Information of her forefathers given on pages C, E, G.Christian Names of Our Children:*Full Names to Whom Married:1st Child:Married to:Born:*Died:*Date of marriage:2nd Child:Married to:Born:*Died:*Date of marriage:3rd Child:Married to:Born:*Died:*Date of marriage:4th ChildMarried to:Born:*Died:*Date of marriage:5th Child:Married to:Born:*Died:*Date of marriage:6th Child:Married to:Born:*Died:*Date of marriage:*57 When married further information given on pages H, I, J.

B.
MY PARENTS.

My father's full name is:

Place of his birth:

Date of his birth:

Residence:

Occupation:

Positions held, traits of character, etc.:

Place of his death:

Date of his death:

Information of his forefathers given on page D.

Place of their marriage:

Date of their marriage:

Full maiden name of his wife:

Place of her birth:

Date of her birth:

Her attainments, traits of character, etc.:

Place of her death:

Date of her death:

Information of her forefathers given on page F.

Christian Names of Their Children:

Full Names to Whom Married:

1st Child:

Married to:

Born:

Died:

Date of marriage:

2nd Child:

Married to:

Born:

Died:

Date of marriage:

3rd Child:

Married to:

Born:

Died:

Date of marriage:

4th Child:

Married to:

Born:

Died:

Date of marriage:

5th Child:

Married to:

Born:

Died:

Date of marriage:

6th Child:

Married to:

Born:

Died:

Date of marriage:

C. MY WIFE'S PARENTS.

My wife's father's full name is:

Place of his birth:

Date of his birth:

Residence:

Occupation:

Positions held, traits of character, etc.:

Place of his death:

Date of his death:

Information of his forefathers given on page E.

Place of their marriage:

Date of their marriage:

Full maiden name of his wife:

Place of her birth:

Date of her birth:

Her attainments, traits of character, etc.:

Place of her death:

Date of her death:

Information of her forefathers given on page G.

Christian Names of Their Children:

Full Names to Whom Married:

1st Child:

Married to:

Born:

Died:

Date of marriage:

2nd Child:

Married to:

Born:

Died:

Date of marriage:

3rd Child:

Married to:

Born:

Died:

Date of marriage:

4th Child:

Married to:

Born:

Died:

Date of marriage:

5th Child:

Married to:

Born:

Died:

Date of marriage:

6th Child:

Married to:

Born:

Died:

Date of marriage:

F.MY MOTHER'S PARENTS.My Mother's father's full name is:Place of his birth:Date of his birth:Residence:Occupation:His father's full name was:His mother's full maiden name was:Place of his death:Date of his death:Place of their marriage:Date of their marriage:Full maiden name of his wife:Place of her birth:Date of her birth:Her father's full name was:Her mother's full maiden name was:Place of her death:Date of her death:Christian Names of Their Children:Full Names to Whom Married:1st Child:Married to:Born:Died:Date of marriage:2nd Child:Married to:Born:Died:Date of marriage:3rd Child:Married to:Born:Died:Date of marriage:4th Child:Married to:Born:Died:Date of marriage:5th Child:Married to:Born:Died:Date of marriage:6th Child:Married to:Born:Died:Date of marriage:

E.MY WIFE'S FATHER'S PARENTS.My wife's Father's father's full name is:Place of his birth:Date of his birth:Residence:Occupation:His father's full name was:His mother's full maiden name was:Place of his death:Date of his death:Place of their marriage:Date of their marriage:Full maiden name of his wife:Place of her birth:Date of her birth:Her father's full name was:Her mother's full maiden name was:Place of her death:Date of her death:Christian Names of Their Children:Full Names to Whom Married:1st Child:Married to:Born:Died:Date of marriage:2nd Child:Married to:Born:Died:Date of marriage:3rd Child:Married to:Born:Died:Date of marriage:4th Child:Married to:Born:Died:Date of marriage:5th Child:Married to:Born:Died:Date of marriage:6th Child:Married to:Born:Died:Date of marriage:

J. RECORD OF MYTH CHILD'S MARRIAGE.

Myth Child's full name is:

Place of birth: Date of birth:

School attended:

Residence: Occupation:

Traits of character, etc.:

Place of marriage: Date of marriage:

Full name to whom married:

Place of birth: Date of birth:

School attended:

Residence: Occupation:

Traits of character, etc.:

Father's full name:

Mother's full maiden name:

Christian Names of Their Children:		Full Names to Whom Married:
1st Child:		Married to:
Born:	Died:	Date of marriage:
2nd Child:		Married to:
Born:	Died:	Date of marriage:
3rd Child:		Married to:
Born:	Died:	Date of marriage:
4th Child:		Married to:
Born:	Died:	Date of marriage:
5th Child:		Married to:
Born:	Died:	Date of marriage:
6th Child:		Married to:
Born:	Died:	Date of marriage:

I. RECORD OF MYTH CHILD'S MARRIAGE.

No.th Child's full name is:

Place of birth: Date of birth:

School attended:

Residence: Occupation:

Traits of character, etc.:

Place of marriage: Date of marriage:

Full name to whom married:

Place of birth: Date of birth:

School attended:

Residence: Occupation:

Traits of character, etc.:

Father's full name:

Mother's full maiden name:

Christian Names of Their Children:		Full Names to Whom Married:
1st Child:	Married to:
Born:	Died:	Date of marriage:
2nd Child:	Married to:
Born:	Died:	Date of marriage:
3rd Child:	Married to:
Born:	Died:	Date of marriage:
4th Child:	Married to:
Born:	Died:	Date of marriage:
5th Child:	Married to:
Born:	Died:	Date of marriage:
6th Child:	Married to:
Born:	Died:	Date of marriage:

L.
NAMES AND ADDRESSES OF RELATIVES
OR OTHER FACTS WHICH SHOULD BE RECORDED.

NON - CIRCULATING

89062872551

B89062872551A

89062872551 b89062872551a